PROPOSITION TO HAVE BOTH WATERWORKS AND SEWER SYSTEMS READY BY OCT. 1

McCrary Company Makes Offer to Council and Board of Public Works to Follow Specifications and Do Construction Work on a Basis of a Percentage and Rush Work

Complete plans and specifications for the proposed waterworks and sewer systems to be installed in this city were brought here this week by Chas. C. Cook, chief engineer for the J. B. McCrary company, and Geo. C. Pierce, representative of the company, and were presented to the city council and board of public works at a joint meeting of those bodies held Tuesday night.

Advertisements for the sale of the bonds are now being published, the advertisements calling for the bids to be opened June 1, and immediately after this bids will be asked on the plans and specifications as prepared by the McCrary company.

The adjourned session of the city council and the joint session with the members of the board of public works was held Tuesday night for the purpose of receiving the specifications from the engineering company, and these specifications were thoroughly explained by Mr. Cook, the reading and explanations taking up the time until the lights went out at midnight, when the session was adjourned to meet again tonight.

The plans submitted by the company are the same as the ones submitted after the surveys and estimates had been made and before the bond election was held in January, and as have been explained in these columns before. The specifications are more detailed than the ones previously submitted, being prepared expressly for the guidance of contractors in bidding on the construction work, and explaining in detail the kind of buildings to be erected, the machinery to be installed, the sizes and kinds of pipe to be laid, etc. Just before the adjournment of the joint session Mr. Pierce, as a representative of the McCrary company, presented a proposition, similar to one presented before, that the McCrary company will guarantee to take the issue of bonds at par, and also take the issue of liens on property for the payment of two-thirds of the cost of sewer installation, if the council and board of public work will contract with the McCrary company to do the construction work on a profit percentage basis. The company proposes to act as purchasing agent for the city in purchasing materials, and guarantees that the total cost of installation of the systems of waterworks and sewers will not be more than the guaranteed estimates previously furnished by the company, and any less cost than this will be saved to the city.

The company also agrees, if this contract is accepted by the council and board of public works, to have the construction work finished and both systems completely installed by the first of October.

This proposed contract will be taken up by the two bodies at the adjourned meeting tonight and further discussed by the members.

OFFICERS ARE CHOSEN BY FIRE DEPARTMENT.

At a meeting of the New Smyrna fire department, held Wednesday evening this week, the following officers were re-elected to serve during the ensuing year:

Chief—F. A. Newell.
Assistant Chief—F. L. Moore.
Secretary—V. A. Newell.
Treasurer—E. J. Rogers.

The remaining officers of the various companies will be chosen at a future meeting.

The trustees were asked to fill the vacancy on that board by appointment.

W. H. Gilmore and Gordon Ferreira were elected to membership in the department.

By the action of the department the automobile truck, which has been in the equipment for some time, has been discarded and the hose placed on a one-horse wagon until some other arrangement can be made to handle the hose. The 30-gallon chemical has been taken off the truck and placed on two wheels as before, and the secretary was instructed to notify E. J. Rogers that the fire department does not wish to keep the truck as a part of the equipment, and that it is left in the fire station subject to his order.

A proposal to move the apparatus to the garage now occupied by Zipper & Patch on Downing street was discussed. Mr. Zipper proposed to rent one-half of the building to the department for the same rent now being paid by the department. F. L. Moore and K. L. Chilton were appointed as a committee to take this matter up with the trustee and council and ask for authority to move the equipment to the new location.

As the department is now without a hose cart, a campaign is to be started at once to get a motor drawn fire truck.

Must Face Criminal Charge
Charles J. Newell, who is charged with a "fruit" violation, was before Justice Newell Wednesday and bound over to the criminal court for trial. Bond was fixed at $200. The complainant was F. M. Salla, an old man with whom Grand jury is alleged to have been in the night, took $51 from Salla's pockets and gave to O. K. Hill, where he was kept in custody. Deputy Sheriff Brooks and a constable back here for the man.

HAWKS PARK COUPLE MARRIED AT DELAND.

At the Episcopal church rectory in Deland at 1 o'clock last Saturday afternoon Alexander MacLean, Jr., and Miss Hester Franks were united in marriage, the ceremony being performed in the presence of Mrs. MacLean and her daughter, Miss Lillian, Mrs. Vrooman, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Vrooman and Donald Murray.

The wedding party made the trip from this city to the county seat for the ceremony and returned to Hawks Park immediately afterward.

The groom is a son of Alexander MacLean, Sr., and has been coming to Hawks Park for the winter seasons for a number of years. He is well known in Hawks Park and New Smyrna. The bride is from Muskegon, Mich., and came to Hawks Park last fall with Mrs. Marshall and her daughter. She has made many friends during her stay here.

Mr. and Mrs. MacLean will remain at Hawks Park through the summer and will leave next fall for the west to make their home.

The newly married couple were given a reception Monday night, attended by a large number of their friends, who suddenly appeared at their home, which proved too small to accommodate the large crowd and an adjournment was taken to the village hall, where Mr. and Mrs. MacLean were presented with a quantity of silverware, the presentation being made by I. S. Crawford. Following this an impromptu program was rendered, consisting of instrumental music by Miss Beryl Murray, recitations by Mrs. Elsiehop and vocal solos by C. W. Murray. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

MRS. SARAH CLARK WEDDING TO HENRY TOWNSEND

At the parsonage of the Methodist church in Daytona Tuesday, April 20, Mrs. Sarah Clark of New Smyrna and Henry Townsend of Daytona were united in marriage, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. J. H. Elder. Mrs. Townsend has been a resident of New Smyrna for many years and has many friends here who wish her joy in her wedded life. They will make their home on Arlington avenue, Daytona.

Mrs. Martha Elfrigue, who has spent the winter at the home of her son, C. L. Berger, left today for her home in New Jersey.

WHY NOT ALL TOGETHER BY ONE PLAN?

The Florida Citrus Exchange is not an experiment. It has already conclusively demonstrated its value to its members as well as the fruit growers of the state who are not members. Certainly these non-members must know that their cooperation is needed to make the work of the exchange more effective.

Here is a mutual association organized without the idea of financial profit in the shape of interest or dividends, for the benefit of the citrus fruit growers of Florida. It has been in successful operation for several years. It has had much to do toward preventing the shipment of immature fruit, which invariably kills the demand on northern markets for one of Florida's finest products. It has had good laws passed to improve conditions for the Florida fruit grower. It has raised the standard of grading and packing citrus fruits until it equals that of any competition. It has secured concessions from transportation companies through its efficient traffic department where individual effort would be ignored. Through its capable management in its grading, packing, transportation and marketing it has secured better prices for its grower-members than they would have otherwise enjoyed and at the same time, as a direct result of its influence, Florida fruit has gained a better reputation and growers who are non-members have benefitted correspondingly.

The business affairs of the Florida Citrus exchange are handled by a corps of experts who understand and carry out the detail of the industry from the nursery to the market. The wonderful results that they have accomplished in spite of difficulties and obstacles have all been brought about at a cost of only a few cents per box to each member.

In spite of all this there are still hundreds of citrus fruit growers in Florida who are not members of the exchange—who will not join hands with their neighbors for their own good.

It is a pleasure, however, to record the fact that the membership in the exchange is steadily growing and the day is not far distant when 50 percent or more of the citrus fruit crop of Florida will be graded and packed under the supervision of and marketed through the Florida Citrus exchange.

We don't know how to put this up stronger to you, Mr. Grower, but if you can carefully consider the past record of the exchange, without prejudice, surely your course will be clear to you and you will lose no time in affiliating with this organization that was established for your benefit.—Florida Farmer and Home-seeker.

Gossip of the Town

by the

Town Gossiper

I understand the city council has given another 60-days order—this time on the buildings at the foot of Lytle avenue—but the building at Faulkner and Julia streets remains and the people are still wondering how long it is 60 days.

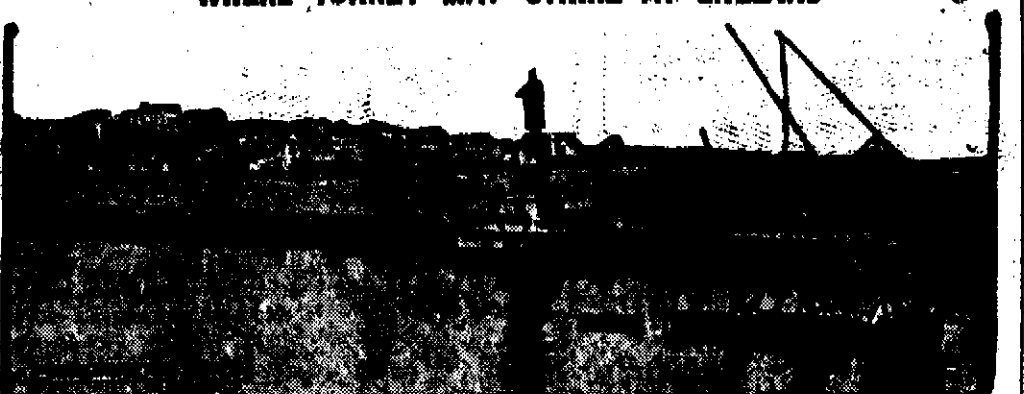

I see by the reports of the recent meeting that W. S. Hart of Hawks Park has again been chosen treasurer of the State Horticultural society and the members of the organization may be assured the funds of the society will be as carefully looked after this year as they were when Mr. Hart took up the duties of that office, which he has satisfactorily filled every year since. Reports from over the state are that much credit is due Mr. Hart for the whole-hearted support he has given the society in the 18 years he has served as its treasurer. He has carefully looked after the funds when there were any and met the needs when there were no funds. It is a thankless job at the most, but Mr. Hart has met the obligations of the society in the same way he takes care of his own business matters.

PROGRESSIVE LEAGUE GETS BUSY FOR CITY CAMPAIGN

NEW OFFICERS TO BE CHOSEN AT SESSION TO BE HELD NEXT MONDAY NIGHT IN PELLET'S HALL.

That the New Smyrna Progressive league proposes to take an active part in the coming city election is indicated by the fact that the league is now being re-organized for the purpose of discussing candidates for city offices and platforms on which the candidates will be asked to stand.

An informal meeting of the league was held last Monday night, when the political situations were talked over and discussed and plans for the campaign were outlined.

Another meeting of the league will be held next Monday night at Pellet's hall, and notices have been sent to all members of the league, as well as those who may be interested in becoming members, to be present at that session. New officers will be chosen at that time and further plans for the future will be made.

John G. Home Severely Injured.

Many friends of J. G. Home of the Florida East Coast railway, who is in charge of the waterworks and pumping stations, will regret to know that he is laid up with a fractured knee cap and many painful bruises, caused by an accident a few days ago near Melbourne. An axle on the little truck motor car on which he was riding on his trip of inspection broke, derailing the car and throwing the occupants into a ditch.—St. Augustine Record.

Mrs. A. E. Boore, son and daughter, have closed their winter home on Magnolia street and left yesterday for their Massachusetts home. Mr. Boore, who was here several weeks during the winter, returned north some time ago.

Geo. L. Branning was ill several days this week and unable to look after his duties as cashier of the State bank.

mailed me a marked copy of the Waterbury, Conn., American, with the following item on "Life at New Smyrna," appearing under the head of West Goshen:

"Joseph A. Lucas and family of Agremont, Mass., have been spending the winter at New Smyrna, on the east coast of Florida, in full view of the Indian river, and report a cold winter there. He wore an overcoat once on an auto ride and again on the night of March 24, when it froze 2,000 acres of pot toes back in the town of Hastings, next north. New Smyrna is a city of 1,800 people with a mayor and marshal, but no 'cops.' The assessor has the whole county and lives at the county seat. The state is democratic, or anti-segno, with tendencies towards Teddy Roosevelt. Seventy-five per cent of the tourists are old progressives and they don't seem contrite or penitent. Fishing is poor, the water is cold. Citrus fruits are plenty and cheap. Culls, drops and deadripe sell from 125 for a quarter up to 50 cents a hundred. Some have been plowed under. Mr. Lucas' party will leave Jacksonville April 26 on the steamer Comanche, Clyde line."

The people of New Smyrna will feel like congratulating Mr. Lucas on his wonderful perceptive qualities, for he made at least one truthful statement—New Smyrna is in full view of the Indian river. The people might also feel like congratulating Mr. Lucas on being able to afford an overcoat for that one little, lonely automobile ride he took. However, they might not feel like congratulating Mr. Lucas if the people of Port Orange, Daytona, Ormond, Dupont, Bunnell, Felt's and a few other cities and towns in the 75 miles between this city and Hastings should get hold of him after making the statement that Hastings is the next town north of New Smyrna. Also, he might not be a subject of congratulation if some of the young winter visitors get hold of his statement that 75 per cent of the tourists are "old" progressives. "Fishing is poor, the water is cold." Did Mr. Lucas come here expecting to sit on the bank of Indian river and have a fish of the Atlantic ocean and have a cold fish jump out of boiling water into his lap? In what part of the Atlantic ocean does Mr. Lucas expect to find hot water? Very respectfully, A. M. Lucas.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

What is the matter with the modern woman's dress?

1. Her skirt, long, heavy and insufficiently full, makes her waste energy with every step.

2. Her corset prevents her from bending or sitting easily, and interferes with deep breathing.

3. Her shoes, by balancing her badly, injure the spinal column, and torture her nerves by unnatural compression of the foot.

4. Her frocks, take too long in the making and in the adjustment, and they cost too much.

5. Her entire costume is designed to satisfy the commercial instincts of men, rather than the wearers' desire for comfort and beauty.

Right on the heels of the Easter fashion parade comes Rose O'Neill's ingenious indictment of Dame Fashion herself. Miss O'Neill, as New York's most notable woman artist, has consented to serve on the Polymurell Prize committee, which is to award the prize of $150 offered by Mrs. Mildred Johnstone Landone for the best design of a universal dress for women. The winning Polymurell must be characterized by simplicity, comfort, beauty and durability. The contest is open until midnight, May 31, and all designs are to be sent to the committee, at No. 523 Riverside Drive.

"I cannot see how women can do housework wearing a long, cumbersome skirt and stiff steel corset without completely exhausting themselves. Every step they take in sweeping a room involves energy wasted in pushing the skirt forward. Every time they bend down to pick up a pin they must suffer hurt and strain. I do not believe that the corset does any woman any good, and I think it is the source of physical harm to many.

"Women's clothes cost so much in pain, in time, in money and in worry. First, there is the making of the dress. If the woman goes to a tailor or dressmaker she must stand long hours for her fittings. If she tries to do the work herself she must sew for long laborious hours. Then there are the precious minutes wasted in adjusting all its complicated fastenings for which assistance must be asked from husband, maid or the woman in the next apartment. The financial outlay is too large, because the arbitrarily changing fashion says the dress must be thrown away before it is worn out. And then the worry of the whole process is to be endured anew.

"The Greek robes are delightful for house wear," she said, "but for the street we need something more crisp. We might have a design with long full trousers and back. We might have bloomers and a knee length skirt. Whatever the costume, I think it should clothe a woman in every position she may assume, as a small child is clothed in a suit of rompers.

"A woman should dress on the street so she can climb a ladder or turn a summersault."

HUGE SAWFISH SEEN AT CENTRAL BRIDGE SATURDAY

(From The Daytona Gazette-News)

Saturday morning a colored woman reported to C. H. Pelletier and Capt. Luther Willin and their wives at the toll house on the Central bridge that a huge sawfish, apparently dead, was lying in the shoal water inshore between the bridge and the seawall of the Orange Island park subdivision. They were unable just then to go and see the fish and shortly thereafter it was noticed by Carl Sparks, who went to the toll house to borrow an axe and coil of rope, with the purpose of securing the saw from the fish. Mr. Sparks waded out to the big fish and met with a surprise when on taking hold of it it suddenly developed a rapid action with its weapon that caused him to beat a hasty retreat to a place of safety, while the sawfish made its way to deep water and escaped. The fish is said by those who saw it to have been between 12 and 15 feet in length, with a saw five or six feet long.

THE GRAND CHAPTER O. E. S. EXEMPLIFIES LOCAL CHAPTER WORK

AT AFTERNOON SESSION CHARTERS WERE GRANTED TO EIGHT NEW CHAPTERS—EXEMPLIFICATION WORK.

(From The Daytona Gazette-News)

The early part of last Thursday afternoon's session, Grand Chapter of the Eastern Star of Florida was devoted to the reports of the Grand Secretary, the Grand Treasurer and the Grand Chaplain. Following the reading of these reports the Grand Chapter enjoyed a vocal solo, "The Lord is My Shepherd," by Mrs. Lillian Adams, of Jacksonville Chapter No. 15.

In the memorial service the song, "Face to Face," was led by Mrs. W. H. Marshall, of Ft. Lauderdale Chapter No. 59.

The memorial service was followed by the reports of the standing committees, the fraternal correspondent and the Florida correspondent.

Charters were granted to new chapters in Blountstown, Seffner, Leesburg, Avon Park, Starke, Bradentown, Palmetto, and Trilby, and a dispensation was continued to Lake View chapter at Compass Lake. The representatives of five of these eight chapters were present and the charters were presented to them by Grand Patron Irving E. Webster, of Gainesville.

The session of the Grand Chapter Thursday evening consisted principally of the exemplification work of a model subordinate chapter by the grand officers, with a candidate for Live Oak chapter, No. 1, of Daytona, and a candidate for Madeleine B. Conklin Chapter No. 16, of Deland.

The exemplification of work was followed by a short program of entertainment, which included a vocal solo by Mrs. W. H. Marshall, a tableau, "Heroines of the Order," by the grand officers, and a solo, "A Little Pink Rose," by Mrs. Emily E. Jeffries, of Eureka Chapter, No. 5, of St. Petersburg. Light refreshments were served at the close of the session.

A feature of the forenoon session Thursday was the reception of a distinguished guest in the person of Mrs. Sadie M. Quigley, Past Grand Matron of Kentucky.

The session of the Grand Chapter held this forenoon was devoted to the reports of committees and the election of officers which resulted as follows:

Grand Matron, Mrs. Lulu M. Scott, Fort Meade; Grand Patron, Claude E. Connor, Ocala; Grand Secretary, A. H. Carter, Holly Hill; Grand Treasurer, Mrs. Cora R. Franz, Jacksonville; Associate Grand Matron, Mrs. Alice H. Haskell, Palatka; Associate Grand Patron, Silas B. Wright, Deland; Grand Conductress, Mrs. Sarah A. Harris, Quincy; Associate Grand Conductress, Mrs. Corrie W. Harris, Tampa.

An Englishwoman "Soldier."

The most famous Englishwoman "soldier" was Dr. James Barry, who joined the medical corps in 1812 and served at Waterloo and in Crimea. In 1858, after many promotions, she became inspector general, and it was not until many years later that the fact that she was a woman was discovered.

BASEBALL AT FRONT

Americans in Foreign Legion Want National Game.

Volunteers From the United States With the French Army Get the Fever at Deceptive Sign of Spring.

Paris.—The correspondent of New York Sun with the Foreign Legion at the front writes:

A postcard came from Toronto saying that he is acting as mechanic for an American aviator with the fifteenth squadron of the royal flying corps at Farnborough, England. He adds that he has been granted ten days' vacation and received $10 advance pay and that the feeding is fine, especially the ham and eggs.

Fred Stone, a New Yorker, has been wounded by shrapnel while on sentinal duty in the trenches at the town of —. Two bullets entered his body, but Dr. Van Vorst, who attended him, assured us he was all right.

A later letter says: This is my birthday. Heavy snow has fallen. Strange, for only yesterday as we were on our way to the shooting trenches from the sugar refinery on the canal, where we had all taken hot shower baths, I was thinking of writing to ask you to send us a baseball outfit. Spring was in the air, and everything was beautiful, so no wonder we all got baseball fever.

Many of the Americans here are college men. There are at least three in the rear and thirteen here. We had 14, but Carstairs is gone, Rockwell is in the hospital at Mont Meriel. Olinger is at the depot at Orleans, and so is Collins, who is still ill. Narwich has just joined us again with some others who have come to fill our ranks. Ganson is also at Orleans. Casey has gone for an eight-day rest.

You may think the idea of baseball here is crazy, but why not? The English play football in the rear of the lines. Do not forget that this war is the most remarkable war in many other ways than its size. It has been pointed out often enough that the firing line is 200 miles in length, but not much attention has been paid to its width. Its depth is so comparatively insignificant that we can play ball if we will when out of the trenches. Of course shells fall in this village where I am writing, where we rest, but we can go another half mile or so to the rear and be entirely out of the danger zone. People are living there again as before the war. They hear the distant roar of cannon, but the noise becomes a habit. Anyone who wants a fine reproduction of the front when firing is going on—not a battle but the ordinary firing—has only to go to some big construction work in New York, where he will hear exactly what we hear every day.

The blasting imitates the cannon, the hammer striking the steel girder gives the rifle shot, a steel girder when dropped reproduces a cannon fire effect, especially through the vibrations caused. But the most remarkable imitation is the hydraulic hammer, that contrivance with which a workman bores holes in steel. This instrument exactly imitates a machine gun in action. If I ever get back to New York I shall jump whenever I hear one.

RIVAL TO "TWILIGHT SLEEP"

In "Sunrise Slumber" Patient Is Conscious, But Feels No Pain.

Columbus, O. — "Twilight sleep," hailed as a godsend to women, has a rival. It is known as "sunrise slumber," the latest in painless childbirth. It was originated here by Dr. C. T. Turner, obstetrical expert at Mount Carmel hospital, and Dr. W. I. Jones, anesthetist.

The new method is not in its infancy. This fact is emphasized by 15 Columbus mothers, who proclaim its virtues, these doctors say. The new treatment differs from "twilight sleep" in that nitrous oxide, commonly known as "laughing gas," is used, and it does not aim to produce complete anesthesia. The patient, it is said, is able to converse and receive impressions, but feels no pain.

MUSTACHE IS REAL BEAUTY

Life Guardsman Dies Curling Hirsute Adornment of His Upper Lip.

"One man of the Life Guards was very particular about his appearance," says Trooper Walter Dale, now at Newcastle-on-Tyne, "and even in war time always carried a little hand mirror with him. I happened to pass him on the field when he had been badly wounded. There he lay, with the glass in his hand, curling his mustache.

"I had to pass on that time, but the next journey we intended to take him to the hospital. It was too late. He was dead and his glass was still clutched in his hand. His mustache had been curled till it was a beauty."

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Breiltsford are on their way home to Paris, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Bailey, who had apartments at Mr. Breiltsford's, left in company with the latter, on their way to their home in Troy, Ohio.

Leon W. Sparkman has recently equipped Archie McDonald's motorcycle with an "Eclipse" two-speed rear wheel, one of the first in this section, and it seems to work very nicely, making slower speed and more power available in deep sand and where needed.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Burgess and Thomas Burgess started on Monday for their home at Woodhull, Ill.

The Port Orange Literary and Library association under the administration of its able and efficient corps of officers, is making itself a strong factor in bringing the home people and winter residents, tourists and visitors together socially, and cultivating a taste for the purest, most elevating and fascinating in literature.

The meetings of the association have been uniformly interesting, useful and inspiring, broadening the views of the members to take in, in wider scope, the best things attainable. In dealing with association matters the members have manifested abilities of no mean order.

In their "cleaning up day," the members showed their sympathy with and set their approval on, and gave impetus to having a cleaner, better and more progressive town.

On their "guest day," the curtain was drawn aside and friends invited to come and participate in one of the many mental feasts of good things so lavishly provided. Thus inviting their guests to become more closely associated with them in striving to attain to the higher things of life.

Though the last official meeting of the association for the season was held on the 8th inst., a farewell picnic was held on Saturday last at Ridgewood hall. A number of the members have gone north and others were unable to be present, but 70 members and guests sat down to tables crowded with choice viands, which under the influence of good fellowship, were partaken of with zest.

The store of food was so abundant that the proposition to come back and have supper found a willing response. Nearly all accepted and were present at the evening meal, and after all had partaken, several baskets (empty or with dishes) and some fragments remained. May the club long prosper and repeat the last program.

Mr. and Mrs. Benney are leaving for their home in Verona, Ill.

The Good Times Club met last week at the homes of Mesdames Scott and Stover, South Riverview, on Tuesday afternoon. This week they are entertained by Mrs. Cory, Dunlawton and Lafayette street.

The reception given at the Prince George hotel, Daytona, last Wednesday evening, by the grand officers of the O. E. S., to members and visitors, was attended by Mrs. Cory, Mrs. Needham, Mrs. Renny, Mrs. Nokes and Mrs. Howard. These ladies, with Mrs. Agnes M. Smith and William Cory, also attended the Grand Chapter Thursday.

A cement crossing, donated by D. E. Lyon, is being put down across Orange street on the south side of Dunlawton avenue.

A bicycle shed for the protection of the pupils' wheels is being erected on the school grounds.

Important Accessory, Anyhow. The automobile people to the contrary notwithstanding, the best safety device continues to be a sofa, with the lights turned low.—Judge.

Seabreeze and Daytona Beach

SEABREEZE.

SEABREEZE, April 17. — Mr. and Mrs. Robt. C. Waterson gave a farewell party to several of their friends Tuesday evening at their winter home on North Halifax avenue, which turned out one of the jolliest impromptu occasions of this season. It is told that the dignified mayor of Seabreeze no less than his honor, L. W. Lott, developed wonderful ability as interlocutor, and Mr. Waterson shone with no less splendor as high comedian. The efforts of the entertainers brought forth peals after peals of merry laughter, and the evening will be long remembered as one of the merriest of all by those who gathered at the hospitable home. Vocal and instrumental music contributed to the pleasures of the evening. Light refreshments were enjoyed. Miss Pierson, at the solicitation of the company gave for the closing number "A Perfect Day," and the season adieux were said to those who left the following day on their way north, after all had joined in singing Auld Lang Syne.

To the gratification of his congregation, Rev. Elmer Willie Serl has been able to so arrange his appointments that he can remain over in Seabreeze until May 1st. In consequence, services will be held at the Tourist church Sunday morning, as usual.

The most encouraging report comes from Dr. A. T. Bigelow, ex-mayor, who has been at Dr. Klöck's hospital for ten days or more. It is quite likely that Dr. Bigelow will be well enough to come home by Saturday.

Mrs. Ruby, who has been at New Smyrna with Major and Mrs. Abercrombie for several months, came home last week and is with Mrs. Bigelow in the doctor's absence.

Mrs. Tincher and her little son, John, who have been with their mother and grandmother, Mrs. Abell, in her home on North Halifax avenue all winter, left Thursday for Washington, D. C., and points in New Jersey, to visit relatives, enroute to their home in Danville, Ill. Mrs. Tincher's maid accompanied them to Jacksonville, to go from there directly to Danville, Ill.

C. S. Coryell, whose family left last Saturday on their return to Toronto, Canada, decided to remain sometime longer, and is guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Waterson, on North Halifax avenue.

Mrs. E. P. Stengle, proprietor of the Geneva, went up to Jacksonville Wednesday morning with Mrs. Bell Cavin and her mother, Mrs. Gunther, the latter of whom has been quite ill at the Geneva for several weeks, but was able to start on her return trip to Owensboro, Ky.

A large number of guests of the Princess Islena left Saturday on their return north. However, business has kept up there splendidly there still being 50 in the hotel at this time.

The social season at the Princess Islena waxed very gay toward the end. For the past two weeks or more, boat parties, putting parties, automobile parties and card parties have followed in quick succession, and although the number has lessened the spirit of pleasure is none the less in evidence.

Mr. and Mrs. George Dillon leave the latter part of the week on their return to Pittsfield, Mass., after a four months' stay at the Princess Islena.

Mrs. C. F. Burgman and sons, Jerome and Leo, and guests of the Seminole Lodge, Mrs. Howard Stanton and daughter, and Mrs. S. Elvin and Miss Marie Zulich joined the excursionists on the Southland for a trip to the Tomoka Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Williams, of Richfield, N. Y., who have been spending the season at New Smyrna, are at the Geneva for the week.

Among other recent arrivals at the Geneva are Mrs. J. Oran and two daughters of Toronto, who came up from Miami this week, and D. M. Shipley and wife, of Shiloh Springs, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Wells closed their winter home on Earl street Monday and left to spend the summer in Malden, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Wells left earlier than usual this spring on account of business matters. Mr. Wells has disposed of his farm and will build a new bungalow home in Malden. Mr. and Mrs. Wells are very active in church work. Mr. Wells is Sunday school superintendent and one of the trustees of the Tourist church. Their numerous friends here would like to see them become all-year-round residents of Seabreeze.

B. F. Jones has had a letter from his son, Thomas Jones, who with his wife returned north about a week ago. The writer says he reached Bordentown, N. J., the day before a blizzard and driving snow storm; that it snowed for two days, and that the snow was a foot deep on the level and four or five feet in drifts. The writer goes on to state that the snow cleared quickly, and that in two days the thermometer stood at 90 degrees, but at the writing it was cold again. And yet we complain of the irregularity of Florida weather. Mr. Jones has been sick and unable to work ever since he reached home.

SEABREEZE, April 19.—The following party of automobilists enjoyed a picnic at DeLeon Springs, Monday of last week: Mr. Hall and his mother, Mrs. Foster, who accompanied Dr. and Mrs. S. Z. Holland in their car, and Mesdames C. A. Lund and W. O.

Upson, who went with Mr. and Mrs. Murdock in their car. They built a fire and had hot coffee and meat, with the ot osters they carried along. On the return home they were caught in a pouring rain, which fell between DeLand and Daytona. Mr. and Mrs. D. Michael and son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Hutton, joined the party in Daytona.

The last meeting of the library club was held at the home of Mrs. W. O. Upson, on Earl street last Tuesday afternoon. Forty-seven ladies were present and the time passed in a pleasant social reunion. The receipts of the afternoon were $4.70.

The following picnic party enjoyed Thursday at Wilbur: Mr. and Mrs. Boyd, Mr. Wilcox, Sr., and daughter, Miss Wilcox, Mrs. B. F. Wells and Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Poor and Mr. Poor's brothers, who are visiting him.

Mrs. Geo. H. Johnson, who has spent the first winter in her new residence on North Peninsula drive, left Wednesday morning to join her family at Endicott, N. Y. Mr. Johnson and daughter went north several weeks ago. The chauffeur and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin, who were located in a cottage on North Halifax avenue, left in the car to drive to Jacksonville, from which point the car will be shipped north.

Mrs. Henry Gane, who with Mrs. Gane and children has been spending the season in the Griggs' home, has gone to Atlantic City, N. J., for treatment by a specialist for a sprained ankle. Mr. and Mrs. Gane expect to leave about May 1st on their return to their home at Santa Barbara, Cal.

At a business meeting held Tuesday afternoon by the trustees of the Methodist church a building committee was appointed, and an architect will be employed to get plans under way to enlarge the seating capacity of the building. The present expectation is to build a basement of sufficient size for a Sunday school room under the east end of the church. It is also hoped to install a pipe organ before another season opens.

Speaking of the parsonage grounds, which are already greatly improved under Rev. and Mrs. John Treadwell's care, Mr. and Mrs. Treadwell wish to extend their thanks to their friends of the congregation who have so generously donated plants for this "community yard."

DAYTONA BEACH.

DAYTONA BEACH, April 16.—John Barb has purchased of W. R. Phillips the Hilton apartment house on Ocean avenue. Mr. Barb is investing and building on Ocean avenue and vicinity in a way that shows his faith in the upbuild of ocean property.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Knox who closed their second season at the Orr apartment house last week, left for Brooklyn, N. Y., their home town, Monday.

W. G. Brewster who, with his wife, has been occupying an apartment in the Orr house left Monday on his return to Detroit, Mich., leaving Mrs. Brewster to join him when the frost gets out of the weather there.

Mrs. Witt, of Kansas City, and friend, Mrs. Parker, of Topeka, Kans., left Tuesday morning on their way home. They occupied rooms in the Orr apartment house.

Mr. and Mrs. Eby regular winter tourists, who this season have been in the Phillips flats on Seabreeze avenue, left Thursday morning on their return to Connersville, Ind.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Wilson, who spent the winter at the county seat, came in from DeLand this week and are located for a short time on Seabreeze avenue. They are delighted with the attractions of Daytona Beach and vicinity and regret that they did not come earlier.

A. P. Robertson left Monday for Rochester, Mich., to join Mrs. Robertson, who was called home a couple of weeks ago.

Mrs. M. F. Barnes, who spent the winter in St. Augustine, came in from that place the first of the week and is with Mr. and Mrs. H. T. M. Treglow at their winter home on Halifax avenue, where she will spend the summer.

Mrs. Edla Phillips, of Peninsula drive, has just closed a deal with Thos. Beach and his son-in-law, Cecil Vining, for the sale of a lot on Coates street, south of Harvey avenue.

Mrs. J. M. Harris and daughter, of Boyne City, Mich., who have been house guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Beardsley at their winter home on Halifax avenue, leave Tuesday for Ann Arbor, Mich. Mrs. Harris is a prominent club woman of her home town, and she very much enjoyed the club privileges of the Sans Souci and Palmto Club meetings.

Sans Souci Club Meeting—

The Sans Souci club met with Mrs. A. J. Beardsley on Halifax avenue, Thursday afternoon, 18 ladies present. Mrs. G. H. Sheets and Mrs. C. L. Watkins were in charge of the program, which was a very interesting one, given by Miss Lucile Stanley Mitchell, principal of the department of domestic science in the Daytona high school. Mrs. Mitchell exhibited samples of the work of the pupils of the school, done under her direction. Many questions were asked and answered, and those present were very much pleased with Miss Mitchell's lecture.

A Much Needed Utility—

At the last meeting of the town council, a permit was granted W. R. Phillips for the erection of a steam laundry on lot 6, Seabreeze avenue, which is the lot adjoining and west of the Phillips apartment house. The building will cost from $2500 to $3000. This is a much needed utility on the peninsula and will receive a large patronage.

Miss Bessie Justice who has been spending a month at Lake Helen, is expected here this week, but will probably spend the summer north.

Mrs. C. W. Tippetson and friend, Mrs. W. H. Deacon, who have been occupying one of the Beardsley cottages, left Friday morning for their home in Jackson, Mich. They will make several stops enroute.

News has reached here of the birth of a son, who arrived early in April, to Mr. and Mrs. Kirby Smith at their home in Jacksonville. Mr. Smith, who was reared here, has many friends in this vicinity.

S. H. Armour, of Toronto, Canada, registered at the Palm for a few days' stay.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Edw. Rector will regret to learn that he is very sick at his home on Peninsula drive. A bad attack of asthma, to which Mr. Rector is subject, has developed into pneumonia.

Mrs. W. S. Cushman, of New Haven, Conn., has returned home, called north earlier than she had planned to go by business. Mr. Cushman, who is employed on the construction of the E. L. King handsome winter home, expects to be here all summer.

Dreams.

It is a common saying that one dreams of that which one has been thinking most about. This is the exception and not the rule. The dream may be of something that one thought of at some time, but possibly not for years, that would not be recalled in waking hours, which had lain dormant in the mind, to be prosaically rehearsed through some operation of physical functions, such as impeded respiration, feverish conditions, some posture of the body, a late supper, possibly ended with a dessert of mince pie, stomachic distress, clogging of the circulation or some bodily pain.

A Flood of Wine.

The Argentinians are a wine-drinking nation. The natives are of Spanish descent and are accustomed to having wine with their meals. The immigrants, who have come in by the millions and who form perhaps one-half of the population, are mostly Italians and Spaniards, all of whom drink wine every day. All of the small Italian farmers have their own wine supply and every one who can afford it lays in a number of casks for his own use.

Baby Knew Another Song.

The most embarrassing moments of my life, writes a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, were one day while I was entertaining the mobster, and wishing to display the sweet voice and really excellent memory of my little three-year-old, I coaxed her to sing the little song I had taught her, namely, "Baby's Boat's a Silver Moon." I had overlooked the fact, however, that the baby's father had taken her to the vaudeville show the other day, and consequently was greatly horrified when she lifted her little skirts and, capering about with an impish look, rattled out: "He's a debbil; he's a debbil in his own home town."

SUNDAY SCHOOL PARADE SUCCESS

EXCELLENT PARADE HELD SUNDAY AFTERNOON BY MEMBERS CLASSES OF CHURCHES OF DAYTONA AND KINGSTON.

(From The Daytona Gazette-News)

The union Sunday school parade in this city on Sunday afternoon was a decided success and was participated in by about 300 members of the Sunday schools of the Baptist, Christian, Congregational, First Methodist and Kingston, Methodist churches which appeared in the parade in the order named.

The parade was led by E. H. Shoemaker, superintendent of the Volusia county Sunday School association, on foot and carrying a large United States flag. There were class banners and flags in great profusion.

The parade started from the Congregational church, at the corner of Volusia and Palmto avenues, went west on Bay street to Ridgewood avenue east on Live Oak avenue to Palmto and north on that avenue to the place of beginning, where the assemblage disbanded.

The start was made from the point stated at shortly after 3:00 p. m., and the paraders marched on the sidewalk on the right side of the street, while a dozen or more automobiles, also containing Sunday school members, kept beside them in the street.

The parade made quite a fine appearance and demonstrated the strength of the Sunday schools of this city and their interest in the work.

An Old College for Girls.

One of the oldest schools for girls on the American continent is the Colegio de la Fez in Mexico City. This was founded by wealthy Spaniards in 1732 for the benefit of the children of the poorer classes. The building was designed after the royal palace in Madrid and covers nearly five acres of ground. The original name was the Colegio de San Ignacio. About eight hundred girls are usually in the college under a staff of 45 teachers.

Weeping Willows.

The weeping willows, so-called (scientific name Salix babylonica), is a native of China, from which country it has been taken over most of the civilized earth. It varies in height and dimensions, according to climate and soil, and invariably maintains its drooping habit, the chief cause of its attractiveness.

Grumbling.

It is the easiest thing in the world to be dissatisfied. Anyone can do it, as the phrase goes, without thinking. But those who really think must agree with Amiel, the philosopher. He counsels thus: "Despise not your situation. In it you must act, suffer and conquer. From every point on earth we are equally near to heaven and the infinite."

Who Pays For Your Printing?

POOR printing is a detriment to any business, and is an unprofitable investment. Poor printing is usually paid for twice—once when you settle with the printer, and again in the injury it does your business.

Good Printing Pays For Itself

IN the added business, in the complete satisfaction you feel in sending out neat, tasty stationery, and its first cost is soon on the credit side of the ledger. Good Printing is remembered long after the price is forgotten.

Crucial Deception.

A neighbor had a parrot and a dog named Mac. The mistress did not allow Mac in the house unless she called him. Mac could open the screen door, but seldom did so, as he was whipped when he did. It amused
Polly much to see Mac whipped.
Polly could imitate the voice of the mistress perfectly. One day Mac was whipped for entering and shut out again. He came in again, then the third time, each time receiving his punishment and being sent out again.
The mistress could not understand why Mac was so unruly, so she did not return to her work, but waited.
What was her surprise to hear a voice say, "Come in, Mac. Poor Mac.
Come in, Mac." It was Polly calling
Mac to see him punished and sent out again.

Surgery in the Air.

Sitting astride a steel beam on the highest section of a new theater under construction a doctor recently chloroformed a structural ironworker, and snapped into place the bones of a dislocated shoulder. When the accident occurred the workman was left helpless, as both arms were disabled, and there was no means of descent except a series of ladders. The doctor removed his hat, coat and vest, and began the dangerous ascent. A workman followed with the doctor's surgical case. After the operation the workman was able to make his way down the ladder and was taken to his home.

FLORIDA CITRUS EXCHANGE

It came to pass several weeks ago that the Florida Citrus Exchange controlled the major portion of the fruit remaining in the State—for the first time in the history of the organization.

Almost immediately prices became good and they have been maintained since at a satisfactory level. The lesson is obvious and justifies the faith of the founders of the Exchange that what has happened would take place whenever the Exchange had the marketing of more than half of the fruit.

The Florida Citrus Exchange can continue to get good prices for the growers so long as they let it handle the greater portion of the crop. Therefore it asks that they entrust it with the marketing of sixty per cent or more of the citrus fruit produced in the State for the coming season that it may keep on doing this.

It is the plan of the Exchange to carry on even more aggressively its splendid advertising to increase consumer demand for Florida oranges and grapefruit. This season it has opened up many markets in which Florida fruit never before was sold. By still further extending this line of effort, the Exchange proposes to sell a much larger proportion of the fruit outside of auctions.

Growers now can join the Exchange with the privilege of having the local Association sell their fruit in carload lots at the packing house to buyers whenever these offer satisfactory prices. Any grower may terminate his contract with the Exchange at the end of shipping season. Won't you join under these conditions? If so, fill out and sign this blank, mailing it to the general offices in Tampa.

Modern Education.

A prominent school principal lately told us some of the answers found in pupils' examination papers. Here are two of them: "What is a volcano?" "A volcano is a mountain that sometimes blows the equator off." "What is the difference between a mountain and a hill?" "A hill is like a mountain, only a mountain is a little more hillier."

The "Forty Immortals" are those constituting the membership of the French Academy, the most eminent of the five academies known together as the Institute of France. It was founded in 1635 by the celebrated Richelieu and reorganized in 1816. Its forty members, after the strictest examination, are elected for life. It meets twice weekly at the Palace Mazarin and is the highest authority on every thing literary in the country. A chair in the academy is the highest ambition of all literary Frenchmen.

And What Could He Answer?

One Sunday morning Mr. Moody, the revivalist, entered a Chicago drug store, distributing tracts. At the back of the store sat an elderly and distinguished citizen reading a morning newspaper. Mr. Moody approached this gentleman and threw one of the temperance tracts upon the paper before him. The old gentleman glanced at the tract, and then, looking up indignantly at Moody, asked: "Are you a reformed drunkard?" "No, sir, I am not!" cried Moody, drawing back indignantly. "Then why don't you reform?" quietly asked the old gentleman.

Unless Properly Packed, Fruit Will Not Bring Top Prices

The marketing of Florida's citrus fruit crop so that it will be profitable largely depends upon the manner in which the fruit is packed. No matter how carefully grown, sprayed and protected in the grove, fruit that is not properly prepared and packed will not bring top prices.

Under normal conditions next season's crop of oranges and grapefruit will be much larger than that of this year. The grower who sends first-quality fruit to the market will again be the man with a big bank account. There will be demand for the best, no matter how great the volume.

Skinner's "Satisfaction Guaranteed" Packing House Machinery Gives Good Fruit the Touch of Quality That Makes it Sell

Anticipating a greater demand than ever for machinery of this kind to be installed in houses now standing and others soon to be erected, we have enlarged our Dunedin plant and this year hope to be prepared to fill all orders.

Future profits in citrus culture depend upon efficient packing house equipment as much as anything else. Skinner's "Satisfaction Guaranteed" machinery has demonstrated that it is a paying proposition to growers of good fruit.

The picnic held Wednesday at Longwood beach was a success from every standpoint. The weather, fine, the attendance good, the dinner beautiful and every one was in the best of spirits. Dinner was served at Daugherty's pavilion and the afternoon was spent in various delightful ways. Some availed themselves of the opportunity for sunbathing, others busied themselves with fancy work, while others passed the time in dancing old time figures. A spirited auction sale of foods left over from the dinner took place just

MATANZAS TO MAKE TWO TRIPS WEEKLY, FORT PIERCE-DAYTONA

(From The Daytona Gazette-News)

The freight boat Matanzas, which for a month or more made weekly round trips between Fort Pierce and Jacksonville inaugurated a twice-a-week schedule this week, beginning Monday. Hereafter the Matanzas will make semi-weekly round trips between Fort Pierce and Daytona, at the latter place transferring her cargo to boats of the Howard Transportation company.

Because new engines were being installed in the Matanzas, she made no trip last week.

Joy in Service.

A life lived for self can never be good nor great. There is only one way to save a life and that is to lose it in service to others. Every child is entitled to a chance "to do the things" which he is able to do for others. Service of this kind brings home the highest joy as the years come and go. It is true, this "doing" affords in childhood days an outlet for physical energy; but better than that it forms the habit of living for others, which will some day prove to be a fountain of perpetual joy to him.

An Ingenious Courtship

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

Mrs. Martindale, realizing the dangers which beset young persons who step into matrimonial traps, desired that her daughter should be settled matrimonially while her mother lived and that she should marry a good man. Edward Sawyer was the person on whom Mrs. Martindale had fixed her intentions for her daughter. One day she said to him:

"Edward, I have noticed that you seem pleased with Gwen. I wish to see her settled before I leave her. If you wish to marry her I will help you to win her. If not, I shall try to make a match for her elsewhere."

"You have not been deceived in my partiality for Gwen, Mrs. Martindale, but I don't see that Gwen has any special partiality for me."

"Gwen is romantic and needs to be won by romance. That is why I fear for her. Some worthless fellow is liable to appeal to her in that way and marry her. I value that which is practical in you and wish that you might sink it temporarily, be a bit sentimental, catch Gwen and marry her. After marriage I am sure your good sense and wisdom will hold her."

Mrs. Sawyer sat evidently turning something over in his mind, then assured Mrs. Martindale that, although he would be glad to win her daughter, he feared that he was too matter of fact to please her.

One day Gwen received a note which put her in a flutter. The writer declared that he had known her for some time; that he had loved her from the moment he first saw her; that he had forborne to give her the slightest liking of his affection because he had not observed any predisposition on her part for him. He was a believer in love from the beginning. He knew the woman he wanted the moment he met her and felt sure that if she wanted him she would know him. While he would not make himself known, he could not refrain from telling her that he loved her.

In a few weeks came a second letter. In it her correspondent said that he was impelled to write to her, though he had no information of himself to communicate. He had met her once since he had written the first letter, but had observed nothing in her greeting to give him any reason to think that she had chosen him as he had chosen her. Nevertheless he had a faint hope that there might be some subtle medium of transference which would enable his love to kindle its like in her.

Whether or not this medium existed, Gwen's heart went out to this unknown lover, or, rather, to a being whom she created. She was troubled that he did not enable her to make even a written reply by giving her an address. But one day she received a letter in which he said that he was ill and was pining for a word from her. If he did not get it he feared for the result. An address was given, but she was assured that she would not be able, even if she desired, to trace him.

Gwen did not find the difficulty to be expected in writing a reply, because she wrote to one created by her own fancy. She did not intend to write a loving letter to an unknown man. She thought she merely expressed sympathy. But sympathy is so nearly akin to love that the expression of the one will often do for the other.

The stranger having given an address where a letter might reach him, quite a brisk correspondence sprang up between him and Gwen. She suggested that he make himself known, that if they could not be lovers they might at least be friends, and she longed to do something to show her appreciation of his preference for her. To this he replied that he was sure that when she knew which of her acquaintances he was, that he was a plain, ordinary man, she could not refrain from showing her disappointment. Nor would she believe that one she had known could have so long concealed the love buried away down in his breast.

To this she replied that such a discovery could not but interest her and might turn the scale in his favor. After much urging and the expression of many misgivings he consented to make himself known. He agreed to call upon her on a certain evening. When that evening arrived she spent much time before her glass arranging her costume, and when she heard the ring of the doorbell her heart leaped into her throat. She went downstairs, trembling with anticipation.

"Why, Ned Sawyer?" Sawyer shrank back as though fearing she was about to cast a blight upon him.

"Can it be," Gwen added, a slight color rising in her cheeks, "that you have so long lived near me, have seen me so often and yet have been able to conceal what you have expressed in those lovely letters?"

"Oh, Gwen, tell me, are you—do you wish I had turned out to be some one else?"

"Why, Ned, do you mean to tell me that you haven't known that I?"

He clasped her to his breast. "No; had I even suspected it I would not have wasted so much time on this confounded—"

He checked himself in time to prevent spoiling what he had accomplished.

PRESENTMENTS OF VOLUSIA GRAND JURY TO CIRCUIT COURT

To the Honorable James W. Perkins, Judge of the Seventh Judicial circuit of Florida in and for Volusia county:

Your grand jury for the spring term A. D. 1915, of the circuit-court of Volusia county, Florida, beg leave to report that we have finished our duties and make this final presentment:

We, as jurors, have been mindful of our oaths and have carefully looked into all matters brought before us, as our duty is, and hope that no guilty person may escape and that no innocent person may suffer.

We have carefully inspected the county jail and found that institution in perfect order and thoroughly clean in all its appointments. We found, however, that a small part of the plumbing system is defective, not being large enough to carry away the waste, and we would recommend to the court that the authorities who have charge of these matters be directed to make such changes as will make said plumbing system perfectly sanitary.

We have also inspected the poor house and would recommend that there be provided for that institution 3 screen doors, 2 screen windows, 1 linen closet and a deep well pump, the present pump being entirely inadequate.

The county offices we found in excellent order and entirely satisfactory.

We wish to thank the Court, his honor, James W. Perkins, and all of the officers of the court for their assistance in all matters required of them; and especially do we desire to express our appreciation of the unfailing courtesies and efficient assistance rendered by our state's attorney, the Honorable Joseph H. Jones, during our deliberations.

All of which we respectfully submit and now ask that if it is the pleasure of the Court, we be discharged for the term.

R. J. BISHOP, Foreman.
GEO. E. ACKROYD, Clerk.

Slavery Originated in the East.
Absolute slavery seems to have appeared in the eastern colonies somewhat earlier than in the southern, for slavery existed in New York in 1628, in New Jersey in 1628, in Massachusetts in 1630, in Connecticut in 1631 and in Delaware in 1636. There was a statutory recognition of slavery in Massachusetts in 1641, which was considerably ahead of such recognition of slavery in Virginia or Maryland.

Danger of Lockjaw in Felt.
That commercial gelatin, charcoal and other substances useful in medicine and surgery may contain the germs of lockjaw is well known. Quite recently it was found that felt so commonly used in orthopedic retentive dressings may also contain these germs in abundance. Two patients who had been treated at a German hospital lost their lives as a result of infection from the felt plates used to make a retention support.

Wrong Position for Sleep.
Sleep cannot knit up the raveled sleeve of care or do any other reparative knitting, if the head is bent sharply to an acute angle with the collar joints. Frequently men and women who have slept in this supposedly objectionable fashion for years and years suddenly lose the capacity for sleep with no new discoverable reason. It is difficult to convince them that the elasticity and resiliency of youth has heretofore made up for their lifelong awkward pose.

Chauvinism.
A chauvinist is one who is absurdly jealous of his country's honor or puffed up with an exaggerated sense of national glory. The words "chauvinist" and "chauvinism" are taken from the name of Nicolas Chauvin, a soldier of Napoleon, who was so notorious for his exaggerated and demonstrative devotion to the imperial cause that he was caricatured on the stage, and his name came to stand for all people who work mischief by their unreasonable, irascible and vainglorious patriotism.

Wily Chinese.
A friend of mine, says a correspondent of the London Chronicle, has just returned from a remote part of China, where he has been laying a railway. He tells me the big difficulty was the graves of Chinamen, over which, of course, no railway is supposed to run. At the outset it looked as if his line, in avoiding these, would become "straighter than a corkscrew, but not so straight as a rainbow." Then he conceived the notion of buying up graves that lay on the coming line of route. The wily Chinese were equal to him, for they dug up the bones of their ancestors and planted them ahead, right in the line of advance. My friend fears that often he paid three times for the same old bones; but ultimately he completed the railway, which now runs in a fairly straight line, except for the first mile or two.

EYES OF THE BLIND

By JOHN CAMERON.

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman.)
Everybody in Birmingham pitied Dorothy Lee. She was a sweet girl, and it was agreed that it was a great pity she was so homely.

"It ain't a fair handicap," said old Mrs. Howell, who kept the post office. "It's hard enough for a girl to get married in New England, anyway, but with her looks—I say it ain't fair."

Dorothy's father probably indorsed this view, but the hard-headed old farmer was too practical a man to worry about his daughter's looks. Dorothy lived alone with him, her mother being dead. What she thought on the subject she never disclosed. She must have known, however, that there was a reason why she was always a wall-flower at parties and was never invited on picnics and such festivities.

When she was twenty-five Tom Lanark came home after an absence of six years in the West.

"Fabulous stories preceded him. He had found a gold mine in Nevada, one of the richest in the world, it was said, and the glare of the sun on the alkali plains had seared his eyeballs until he could only distinguish light from darkness. So he had come back at thirty, to resume life—no, not to resume it, but to take up its burden alone in the old house that had given him birth."

Margaret Barnett had been an old flame of Tom's in the bygone days. But if there was any idea that she would link her life to a blind man's Margaret, who was "running" with the banker's son, dismissed it promptly.

"I want a live one when I get married," she said. And Dorothy witnessed a snubbing which Margaret administered to Tom in the street, in front of her house.

She saw the blind man trying to peer after the girl whose shrill, scornful laughter echoed through the quiet street, and an excess of pity overcame her shrinking, and she hurried out.

"Mr. Lanark," she said quickly, conscious that her words were almost beyond her control, "I am Dorothy Lee. Don't you remember me?"

Tom Lanark felt for her hands and took them in his. "Indeed I do," he answered warmly. "I have often thought of you since I have been away."

"I think it was a shame the way Margaret Barnett spoke to you," declared Dorothy indignantly.

"Ah, well, one lives and finds out these things," replied the blind man wearily.

After that Tom fell into the habit of dropping into the old farmer's place of an afternoon, and on one occasion he actually drove up in a buggy.

"I thought I'd ask you to come for a drive with me, Miss Dorothy," he explained. "I was sure I knew the way down the street to here, and that you'd do the rest—if you are willing to do an act of kindness for a blind man."

"O, I should love to go driving with you," the girl answered. She ran upstairs to change her frock, and, five minutes later, the village was speculating over the appearance of Dorothy and Tom, driving down the road into the country and chatting as merrily as though they were old friends—which, indeed, they might have been called.

But during the return Dorothy became very pensive. For she knew that her heart had turned very strongly in the direction of the blind man, and that he, too, as her woman's instinct told her, was by no means indifferent to her.

And when they neared the town he suddenly placed his arm around her and drew her toward him.

"Do you think you can ever learn to care for a blind man, Dorothy?" he asked.

It was a tremulous figure, shrinking and nerved only by intense resolution, that went to Tom's door that night, fearful of discovery by the prying eyes of the town, yet spurred on by the sense of tremendous necessity. And, after she had knocked, she could hardly make her knees support her, and clung to the door-jamb for support.

The door opened. Tom peered out. Then:

"I can't marry you," the girl was sobbing wildly. "You have never seen me as I am, Tom. You don't know—"

"Don't know what, dear?" asked Tom's quiet voice. She felt his hands on her shoulders, but she could not see him through the gathering tears.

"I am the homeliest girl in Birmingham," cried Dorothy. "If ever you saw me you would be ashamed of me, Tom. And I can't marry you and not let you know; and I can't marry you and let you be ashamed of me."

She was beyond all self-control. She was weeping in his arms. She heard Tom's voice between his kisses.

"Dorothy, you are the prettiest girl in Birmingham, and it wouldn't make any difference to me anyway," he said, "because I love you. Now I will tell you something, dear. I am not quite so blind as people think—in fact the doctor says that in a few months more I may see as well as ever. Sometimes a man may pretend to be blind, Dorothy, in order to know his real friends from his false ones."

"How pretty Dorothy Lee has grown since her engagement to Tom Lanark," said the gossips later.

And all agreed that she made the sweetest bride that ever came out of Birmingham—all but Margaret Barnett, who was no longer "running" with the banker's son.

MISS ALICE GERSTENBERG

One of the youthful and extremely promising novelists and dramatists is Miss Alice Gerstenberg. After spending three years at Bryn Mawr college she decided that she wanted some "real work," as she sincerely put it, and launched into the literary field. As an author Miss Gerstenberg is not unknown to the American public, her "Unquenched Fire" and "The Conscience of Sarah Platt" having been favorably received.

In the dramatic field Miss Gerstenberg is known to the theater-goers by her "Alice in Wonderland" and the "Model Maid."

With all these activities in the literary field Miss Gerstenberg finds time to belong to many clubs in her home city, Chicago. Still she is the most modest and unassuming little person in the world.

HOW THE KAISER APPEARS

Correspondent Writes Pen Picture of Emperor as He Saw Him at Front.

Berlin.—A pen picture of the kaiser appears in the Kreuz-Zeitung from its war correspondent with the German troops in Poland, who says: "The kaiser appeared with General Mackensen, and passed along in front of the officers and troops. I had not seen him since the time when at the beginning of the war he spoke to the crowd from the balcony of the castle in Berlin."

"For one moment I had formed the impression that he had become terribly gray in the campaign. That, however, was an error, which arose from the fact that his head protector, which he was wearing owing to the extremely cold weather, was gray."

"The supreme war lord appears, on the contrary, extraordinarily fresh and elastic, even though the seriousness of these last months has left marks on his features, and a certain bitterness which formerly was not present comes into his voice when he speaks."

"When I saw him I could not help thinking of the kaiser parade in 1885 on the Spandau drill ground. How brilliant he then looked, how forceful, how confident in the future and victory!"

AUSTRIAN BAR IN PROTEST

Object to Restraining Refugee Lawyers of Galicia and Bukovina From Practicing.

Vienna.—A committee of the Austrian Bar association has recently drawn up a vigorous protest against the enactments of the government restraining the refugee lawyers of Galicia and Bukovina from the practice of their profession in lower Austria. The representations of the committee, which has behind it not only the prominent lawyers of Vienna, but of all the Austrian crownlands, received instant and hearty indorsement from the bar. The Austrian Bar association repudiated all sympathy with the illiberal policy of the state authorities, and by a three-quarters vote of its members, put itself on record against the proceedings disbarring its colleagues from Galicia and Bukovina. Public opinion, too, keenly alive to the fact that the government is imposing disabilities on a part of its population which is suffering for its sake, is in emphatic accord with the stand of the lawyer's committee.

"SOLOMON" ENDS BABY CASE

This Time in Person of New York Lawyer—He Foregoes the Sword.

New York.—May a child be held for board unpaid?

The question was asked of Magistrate Barlow, when Mrs. May Berghard, whose baby was born last August, summoned to court Mrs. Minnie Curtis because she had refused to give up the child until Mrs. Berghard paid $10 arrears of board for the baby.

On consulting the court Bible, Magistrate Barlow, in emulation of King Solomon in a similar case, glanced about for the state sword which should have been behind his chair. The court stenographer had taken it away to sharpen his pencil, and in default of anything bigger than a paper cutter Magistrate Barlow threw biblical instructions to the winds, and gave the child back to its mother.

BUNKOED BY A GREEK

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The pair of us had been in Athens three or four days when a party of English excursionists who were making a tour arrived. Among them was an antiquary who was looked up to and respected for his knowledge of ancient history and ruins.

Professor Himstead, as he was named, had been charged to pick up all the old Greek manuscripts to be had for money, and it was his inquiries for such documents that doubtless led to our undoing. One day a man named Talanti, who had somewhat the manners and dress of a gentleman, brought the professor two ancient manuscripts as a present, and to show his further good will he announced a valuable discovery which had just been made on the island of Aegina, about forty miles distant. He was the owner of the island, and while his workmen were getting out some stone they had come across some rare treasures in art, but had developed only a small portion of them. They had partly uncovered a stone box which he believed held a large number of manuscripts and valuable coins, but he had delayed the opening of it that some of his friends might be present. Three or four of them were going to his island home tomorrow, and he would be glad to have on his yacht as many of us foreigners go along as could make it convenient.

Aside from the English party, there were Americans, Germans and Frenchmen to the number of twenty in Athens, and when the list was made up we numbered over forty, of whom ten were ladies. When we went on board there was considerable surprise at finding her the craft she was. She was nothing more than a trader, and her accommodations were of a primitive character.

My friend the professor could speak Greek, but when he entered into conversation with Mr. Talanti's friends he found them sulky enough. This excited our surprise, as they were supposed to be gentlemen. When we came to look them over we began to get a little suspicious.

As we approached the island we saw it was fairly covered with trees, yet it did not have a hospitable look. As we made a close approach we could see a couple of rude huts and a primitive jetty, but Mr. Talanti explained that his castle was hidden by the forest and that he was landing at that point to save us a long walk.

As soon as the craft was made fast the three eminent friends of Mr. Talanti suddenly produced pistols and knives and took their station by the gangway. The sailors divided into two parties, and, handling their naked knives in a menacing fashion, they drove the people into line.

When Professor Himstead had rubbed his eyes, scratched his head and got it into his brain that something not down on the program was going on Talanti mounted a box and smilingly observed:

"Ladies and gentlemen, you are now about to pass ashore to behold my wonderful discoveries, but each one of you is required to leave all money and jewelry behind you. I will see that everything is safely cared for!"

The men cried out in anger, but what could they do? I do not think there was a firearm among them, while the Greeks seemed overanxious to use their knives. There were protestations and threats of the law, but Talanti only smiled at them and ordered the work to go on. Each man in the crowd was regularly held up—that is, his pockets were thoroughly searched and everything of value taken. The women were requested to hand over, and each one had her watch and rings in hand as she moved up. In the course of half an hour every one was ashore, and then Talanti took off his hat, made a sweeping bow and sailed away with his piratical crew. He had no sooner gone than half a dozen villainous looking men came down from the hut.

They told us they were fishermen, but their actions belied their statement. Their first move was to demand cash, and great was their indignation and disappointment at being told that Talanti's crowd had taken the last coin. When sure of this they left us, and an hour later two genuine fishermen came ashore in their boat. There were a dozen vessels within five or six miles of us, and a dollar would have been big pay for them to go out and notify the nearest one of our situation; but, realizing our helplessness, they demanded the sum of $100.

It was almost dark when a battered old schooner came sailing up to take us off, and the terms were $2 a piece, to be paid in Athens. We spent a dreary night on deck and landed in the city at noon next day. Immediately notice was given to the various consuls and to the Greek government, but no one had any faith that anything would be accomplished. The government made loud promises and seemed to be making all possible efforts; but, as a matter of fact, Mr. Talanti was not even pursued. He never could have put up such a job without a number of officials standing in with him, and each and every one of them doubtless shared in the plunder when it was divided. It was said that the money and jewelry amounted to about $8,000, and the only consolation about of the victims had was the privilege of abusing a country where such things could be carried out.

BIGGEST WARSHIP MAY NOT LONG HOLD THAT DISTINCTION

WASHINGTON, April 21. — The United States superdreadnaught, Pennsylvania, launched by the Newport Shipbuilding company a few weeks ago, when completed, will be the largest and most powerful fighting machine afloat.

How long will she hold that title? From present indications, not long. Already ordnance experts are beginning to think in larger units. When the keel of Uncle Sam's next superdreadnaught is laid, the belief now is that there will be included in her equipment a new feature.

(This new feature promises to revolutionize the marine ordnance of the United States navy and will be the biggest step yet taken in the perfecting of the superdreadnaught type of battleship.)

It is the new type of naval gun, 16-inch calibre—greater by one inch than the much-heralded guns of the powerful British superdreadnaught of the Queen Elizabeth class.

Experiments with this type of gun are, and for some time have been, underway by the ordnance officers at the naval proving grounds at Indian Head, Md.

The United States navy for years has religiously adhered to the 14-inch gun. They thought it filled the bill in all respects and didn't want any other. But the European war has taught lessons and the value of large calibre guns is one of them.

So successful have the experiments proven, thus far, that it is confidently predicted that the ordnance officers of the navy department will recommend the installation of this type of gun on the two dreadnaughts authorized by the last congress.

Should this style of equipment be extended also to the dreadnaughts California, Idaho and Mississippi, authorized last year, a complete division of 16-inch gun battleships would be available. This would make the most formidable unit afloat.

All tests of this type of weapon are carefully guarded, but it is said that the new gun is about forty-eight feet long and the weight of the projectile hurled is approximately 3,000 pounds.

A vessel mounting a full complement of these guns for its main battery—four turrets of three guns each—could hurl a broadside of about 24,000 pounds, or twelve tons.

This is about 10,400 pounds more than a broadside from the eight 15-inch guns of the British superdreadnaught Queen Elizabeth.

It is the work of this ship that the experts here are watching with the utmost care and the effectiveness of her ordnance will go a great way toward deciding the difference now existing between the two schools of naval armament.

Wonderful Cuban Caves.

The wonderful caves of Belkamar, Cuba, to the east of Havana, attract the attention of the ambitious tourist. They are on a plateau as level as a table top, which presents no signs of the existence of such caves. After descending into the earth, however, a picture unfolds itself. Then come many passages, and at last the great "Gothic temple," 250 feet long and 80 feet wide.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

What is the matter with the modern woman's dress?

1. Her skirt, long, heavy and insufficiently full, makes her waste energy with every step.

2. Her corset prevents her from bending or sitting easily, and interferes with deep breathing.

3. Her shoes, by balancing her badly, injure the spinal column, and torture her nerves by unnatural compression of the foot.

4. Her frocks take too long in the making and in the adjustment, and they cost too much.

5. Her entire costume is designed to satisfy the commercial instincts of men, rather than the wearers' desire for comfort and beauty.

Right on the heels of the Easter fashion parade comes Rose O'Neill's ingenious indictment of Dame Fashion herself. Miss O'Neill, as New York's most notable woman artist, has consented to serve on the Polymurell Prize committee, which is to award the prize of $150 offered by Mrs. Mildred Johnstone Landone for the best design of a universal dress for women. The winning Polymurell must be characterized by simplicity, comfort, beauty and durability. The contest is open until midnight, May 31, and all designs are to be sent to the committee, at No. 528 Riverside Drive.

"I cannot see how women can do housework wearing a long, cumbersome skirt and stiff steel corset without completely exhausting themselves. Every step they take in sweeping a room involves energy wasted in pushing the skirt forward. Every time they bend down to pick up a pin they must suffer hurt and strain. I do not believe that the corset does any woman any good, and I think it is the source of physical harm to many.

"Women's clothes cost so much in pain, in time, in money and in worry. First, there is the making of the dress. If the woman goes to a tailor or dressmaker she must stand long hours for her fittings. If she tries to do the work herself she must sew for long laborious hours. Then there are the precious minutes wasted in adjusting all its complicated fastenings for which assistance must be asked from husband, maid or the woman in the next apartment. The financial outlay is too large, because the arbitrarily changing fashion says the dress must be thrown away before it is worn out. And then the worry of the whole process is to be endured anew.

"The Greek robes are delightful for house wear," she said, "but for the street we need something more crisp. We might have a design with long full trousers and back. We might have bloomers and a knee length skirt. Whatever the costume, I think it should clothe a woman in every position she may assume, as a small child is clothed in a suit of rompers.

"A woman should dress on the street so she can climb a ladder or turn a summersault."

Starling Unpopular Bird.
Starlings are not liked in Australia, according to reports from the American consul at Melbourne. Besides being destructive to fruit, they are charged with turning valuable insect eating birds out of their nests.

HUGE SAWFISH SEEN AT CENTRAL BRIDGE SATURDAY

(From The Daytona Gazette-News).—Saturday morning a colored woman reported to C. H. Pelleleer and Capt. Luther Willin and their wives at the toll house on the Central bridge that a huge sawfish, apparently dead, was lying in the shoal water inshore between the bridge and the seawall of the Orange Island park subdivision. They were unable just then to go and see the fish and shortly thereafter it was noticed by Carl Sparks, who went to the toll house to borrow an axe and coil of rope, with the purpose of securing the saw from the fish. Mr. Sparks waded out to the big fish and met with a surprise when on taking hold of it it suddenly developed a rapid action with its weapon that caused him to beat a hasty retreat to a place of safety, while the sawfish made its way to deep water and escaped. The fish is said by those who saw it to have been between 12 and 15 feet in length, with a saw five or six feet long.

THE GRAND CHAPTER O. E. S. EXEMPLIFIES LOCAL CHAPTER WORK

AT AFTERNOON SESSION CHARTERS WERE GRANTED TO EIGHT NEW CHAPTERS—EXEMPLIFICATION WORK.

(From The Daytona Gazette-News)

The early part of last Thursday afternoon's session, Grand Chapter of the Eastern Star of Florida was devoted to the reports of the Grand Secretary, the Grand Treasurer and the Grand Chaplain. Following the reading of these reports the Grand Chapter enjoyed a vocal solo, "The Lord is My Shepherd," by Mrs. Lillian Adams, of Jacksonville Chapter No. 15. In the memorial service the song, "Face to Face," was led by Mrs. W. H. Marshall, of Ft. Lauderdale Chapter No. 59.

The memorial service was followed by the reports of the standing committees, the fraternal correspondent and the Florida correspondent.

Charters were granted to new chapters in Blountstown, Seffner, Leesburg, Avon Park, Starke, Bradentown, Palmetto, and Trilby, and a dispensation was continued to Lake View chapter at Compass Lake. The representatives of five of these eight chapters were present and the charters were presented to them by Grand Patron Irving E. Webster, of Gainesville.

The session of the Grand Chapter Thursday evening consisted principally of the exemplification work of a model subordinate chapter by the grand officers, with a candidate for Live Oak chapter, No. 1, of Daytona, and a candidate for Madeline B. Conklin Chapter No. 14, of Deland.

The exemplification of work was followed by a short program of entertainment, which included a vocal solo by Mrs. W. H. Marshall, a tableau, "Heroines of the Order," by the grand officers, and a solo, "A Little Pink Rose," by Mrs. Emily E. Jeffries, of Eureka Chapter, No. 5, of St. Petersburg. Light refreshments were served at the close of the session.

A feature of the forenoon session Thursday was the reception of a distinguished guest in the person of Mrs. Sadie M. Quigley, Past Grand Matron of Kentucky.

The session of the Grand Chapter held this forenoon was devoted to the reports of committees and the election of officers which resulted as follows:

Grand Matron, Mrs. Lulu M. Scott, Fort Meade; Grand Patron, Claude E. Connor, Ocala; Grand Secretary, A. H. Carter, Holly Hill; Grand Treasurer, Mrs. Cora R. Franz, Jacksonville; Associate Grand Matron, Mrs. Alice H. Haskell, Palatka; Associate Grand Patron, Sillas B. Wright, Deland; Grand Conductress, Mrs. Sarah A. Harris, Quincy; Associate Grand Conductress, Mrs. Corrie W. Harris, Tampa.

An Englishwoman "Soldier."

The most famous Englishwoman "soldier" was Dr. James Barry, who joined the medical corps in 1813 and served at Waterloo and in Crimea. In 1858, after many promotions, she became inspector general, and it was not until many years later that the fact that she was a woman was discovered.

BASEBALL AT FRONT

Americans in Foreign Legion Want National Game.

Volunteers From the United States With the French Army Get the Fever at Deceptive Sign of Spring.

Paris.—The correspondent of New York Sun with the Foreign Legion at the front writes:

A postcard came from Toronto saying that he is acting as mechanic for an American aviator with the fifteenth squadron of the royal flying corps at Farnborough, England. He adds that he has been granted ten days' vacation and received $10 advance pay and that the feeding is fine, especially the ham and eggs.

Fred Stone, a New Yorker, has been wounded by shrapnel while on sentinal duty in the trenches at the town of —. Two bullets entered his body, but Dr. Van Vorst, who attended him, assured us he was all right.

A later letter says:

This is my birthday. Heavy snow has fallen. Strange, for only yesterday as we were on our way to the shooting trenches from the sugar refinery on the canal, where we had all taken hot shower baths, I was thinking of writing to ask you to send us a baseball outfit. Spring was in the air, and everything was beautiful, so no wonder we all got baseball fever.

Many of the Americans here are college men. There are at least three in the rear and thirteen here. We had 14, but Carstairs is gone, Rockwell is in the hospital at Mont Meriel. Olinger is at the depot at Orleans, and so is Collins, who is still ill. Narwich has just joined us again with some others who have come to fill our ranks. Ganson is also at Orleans. Casey has gone for an eight-day rest.

You may think the idea of baseball here is crazy, but why not? The English play football in the rear of the lines. Do not forget that this war is the most remarkable war in many other ways than its size. It has been pointed out often enough that the firing line is 200 miles in length, but not much attention has been paid to its width. Its depth is so comparatively insignificant that we can play ball if we will when out of the trenches. Of course shells fall in this village where I am writing, where we rest, but we can go another half mile or so to the rear and be entirely out of the danger zone. People are living there again as before the war. They hear the distant roar of cannon, but the noise becomes a habit. Anyone who wants a fine reproduction of the front when firing is going on—not a battle but the ordinary firing—has only to go to some big construction work in New York, where he will hear exactly what we hear every day.

The blasting imitates the cannon, the hammer striking the steel girder gives the rifle shot, a steel girder when dropped reproduces a cannon fire effect, especially through the vibrations caused. But the most remarkable imitation is the hydraulic hammer, that contrivance with which a workman bores holes in steel. This instrument exactly imitates a machine gun in action. If I ever get back to New York I shall jump whenever I hear one.

RIVAL TO "TWILIGHT SLEEP"

In "Sunrise Slumber" Patient Is Conscious, But Feels No Pain.

Columbus, O. — "Twilight sleep," hailed as a godsend to women, has a rival. It is known as "sunrise slumber," the latest in painless childbirth. It was originated here by Dr. C. T. Turner, obstetrical expert at Mount Carmel hospital, and Dr. W. I. Jones, anesthetist.

The new method is not in its infancy. This fact is emphasized by 15 Columbus mothers, who proclaim its virtues, these doctors say. The new treatment differs from "twilight sleep" in that nitrous oxide, commonly known as "laughing gas," is used, and it does not aim to produce complete anesthesia. The patient, it is said, is able to converse and receive impressions, but feels no pain.

MUSTACHE IS REAL BEAUTY

Life Guardsman Dies Curling Mustache Adornment of His Upper Lip.

"One man of the Life Guards was very particular about his appearance," says Trooper Walter Dale, now at Newcastle-on-Tyne, "and even in war time always carried a little hand mirror with him. I happened to pass him on the field when he had been badly wounded. There he lay, with the glass in his hand, curling his mustache.

"I had to pass on that time, but the next journey we intended to take him to the hospital. It was too late. He was dead and his glass was still clutched in his hand. His mustache had been curled till it was a beauty."

Seabreeze and Daytona Beach

SEABREEZE.

SEABREEZE, April 17. — Mr. and Mrs. Robt. C. Waterson gave a farewell party to several of their friends Tuesday evening at their winter home on North Halifax avenue, which turned out one of the jolliest impromptu occasions of this season. It is told that the dignified mayor of Seabreeze no less than his honor, L. W. Lott, developed wonderful ability as interloctor, and Mr. Waterson shone with no less splendor as high comedian. The efforts of the entertainers brought forth peals after peals of merry laughter, and the evening will be long remembered as one of the merriest of all by those who gathered at the hospitable home. Vocal and instrumental music contributed to the pleasures of the evening. Light refreshments were enjoyed. Miss Pierson, at the solicitation of the company gave for the closing number "A Perfect Day," and the season adieus were said to those who left the following day on their way north, after all had joined in singing Auld Lang Syne.

To the gratification of his congregation, Rev. Elmer Willie Serl has been able to so arrange his appointments that he can remain over in Seabreeze until May 1st. In consequence, services will be held at the Tourist church Sunday morning, as usual.

The most encouraging report comes from Dr. A. T. Bigelow, ex-mayor, who has been at Dr. Klöck's hospital for ten days or more. It is quite likely that Dr. Bigelow will be well enough to come home by Saturday.

Mrs. Ruby, who has been at New Smyrna with Major and Mrs. Abercrombie for several months, came home last week and is with Mrs. Bigelow in the doctor's absence.

Mrs. Tincher and her little son, John, who have been with their mother and grandmother, Mrs. Abell, in her home on North Halifax avenue all winter, left Thursday for Washington, D. C., and points in New Jersey, to visit relatives, enroute to their home in Danville, Ill. Mrs. Tincher's maid accompanied them to Jacksonville, to go from there directly to Danville, Ill.

C. S. Coryell, whose family left last Saturday on their return to Toronto, Canada, decided to remain sometime longer, and is guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Waterson, on North Halifax avenue.

Mrs. E. P. Stengle, proprietor of the Geneva, went up to Jacksonville Wednesday morning with Mrs. Bell Cavin and her mother, Mrs. Gunther, the latter of whom has been quite ill at the Geneva for several weeks, but was able to start on her return trip to Owensboro, Ky.

A large number of guests of the Princess Issena left Saturday on their return north. However, business has kept up there splendidly there still being 50 in the hotel at this time.

The social season at the Princess Issena waxed very gay toward the end. For the past two weeks, or more, boat parties, putting parties, automobile parties and card parties have followed in quick succession, and although the number has lessened the spirit of pleasure is none the less in evidence.

Mr. and Mrs. George Dillon leave the latter part of the week on their return to Pittsfield, Mass., after a four months' stay at the Princess Issena.

Mrs. C. F. Burgman and sons, Jerome and Leo, and guests of the Seminole Lodge, Mrs. Howard Stanton and daughter, and Mrs. S. Elvin and Miss Marie Zulich joined the excursionists on the Southland for a trip to the Tomoka Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Williams, of Richfield, N. Y., who have been spending the season at New Smyrna, are at the Geneva for the week.

Among other recent arrivals at the Geneva are Mrs. J. Oran and two daughters of Toronto, who came up from Miami this week, and D. M. Shipley and wife, of Shiloh Springs, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Wells closed their winter home on Earl street Monday and left to spend the summer in Malden, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Wells left earlier than usual this spring on account of business matters. Mr. Wells has disposed to his farm and will build a new bungalow home in Malden. Mr. and Mrs. Wells are very active in church work. Mr. Wells is Sunday school superintendent and one of the trustees of the Tourist church. Their numerous friends here would like to see them become all-the-year-round residents of Seabreeze.

B. F. Jones has had a letter from their son, Thomas Jones, who with his wife returned north about a week ago. The writer says he reached Bordentown, N. J., the day before a blizzard and driving snow storm; that it snowed for two days, and that the snow was a foot deep on the level and four or five feet in drifts. The writer goes on to state that the snow cleared quickly, and that in two days the thermometer stood at 90 degrees, but at the writing it was cold again. And yet we complain of the irregularity of Florida weather. Mr. Jones has been sick and unable to work ever since he reached home.

SEABREEZE, April 19.—The following party of automobilists enjoyed a picnic at DeLeon Springs, Monday of last week: Mr. Hall and his mother, Mrs. Foster, who accompanied Dr. and Mrs. S. Z. Holland in their car, and Mesdames C. A. Lund and W. O.

Upson, who went with Mr. and Mrs. Marlock in their car. They built a fire and had hot coffee and meat, with the ceteras they carried along. On the return home they were caught in a pouring rain, which fell between DeLand and Daytona. Mr. and Mrs. D. Michael and son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Hutton, joined the party in Daytona.

The last meeting of the library club was held at the home of Mrs. W. O. Upson, on Earl street last Tuesday afternoon. Forty-seven ladies were present and the time passed in a pleasant social reunion. The receipts of the afternoon were $4.70.

The following picnic party enjoyed Thursday at Wilbur: Mr. and Mrs. Boyd, Mr. Wilcox, Sr., and daughter, Miss Wilcox, Mrs. B. F. Wells and Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Poor and Mr. Poor's brothers, who are visiting him.

Mrs. Geo. H. Johnson, who has spent the first winter in her new residence on North Peninsula drive, left Wednesday morning to join her family at Endicott, N. Y. Mr. Johnson and daughter went north several weeks ago. The chauffeur and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin, who were located in a cottage on North Halifax avenue, left in the car to drive to Jacksonville, from which point the car will be shipped north.

Mrs. Henry Gane, who with Mrs. Gane and children has been spending the season in the Griggs' home, has gone to Atlantic City, N. J., for treatment by a specialist for a sprained ankle. Mr. and Mrs. Gane expect to leave about May 1st on their return to their home at Santa Barbara, Cal.

At a business meeting held Tuesday afternoon by the trustees of the Methodist church a building committee was appointed, and an architect will be employed to get plans under way to enlarge the seating capacity of the building. The present expectation is to build a basement of sufficient size for a Sunday school room under the east end of the church. It is also hoped to install a pipe organ before another season opens.

Speaking of the parsonage grounds, which are already greatly improved under Rev. and Mrs. John Treadwell's care, Mr. and Mrs. Treadwell wish to extend their thanks to their friends of the congregation who have so generously donated plants for this "community yard."

DAYTONA BEACH.

DAYTONA BEACH, April 16.—John Barb has purchased of W. R. Phillips the Hilton apartment house on Ocean avenue. Mr. Barb is investing and building on Ocean avenue and vicinity in a way that shows his faith in the upbuild of ocean property.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Knox who closed their second season at the Orr apartment house last week, left for Brooklyn, N. Y., their home town, Monday.

W. G. Brewster who, with his wife, has been occupying an apartment in the Orr house left Monday on his return to Detroit, Mich., leaving Mrs. Brewster to join him when the frost gets out of the weather there.

Mrs. Witt, of Kansas City, and friend, Mrs. Parker, of Topeka, Kans., left Tuesday morning on their way home. They occupied rooms in the Orr apartment house.

Mr. and Mrs. Eby regular winter tourists, who this season have been in the Phillips flats on Seabreeze avenue, left Thursday morning on their return to Connersville, Ind.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Wilson, who spent the winter at the county seat, came in from DeLand this week and are located for a short time on Seabreeze avenue. They are delighted with the attractions of Daytona Beach and vicinity and regret that they did not come earlier.

A. P. Robertson left Monday for Rochester, Mich., to join Mrs. Robertson, who was called home a couple of weeks ago.

Mrs. M. F. Barnes, who spent the winter in St. Augustine, came in from that place the first of the week and is with Mr. and Mrs. H. T. M. Treglown at their winter home on Halifax avenue, where she will spend the summer.

Mrs. Edla Phillips, of Peninsula drive, has just closed a deal with Thos. Beach and his son-in-law, Cecil Vining, for the sale of a lot on Coates street, south of Harvey avenue.

Mrs. J. M. Harris and daughter, of Boyne City, Mich., who have been house guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Beardsley at their winter home on Halifax avenue, leave Tuesday for Ann Arbor, Mich. Mrs. Harris is a prominent club woman of her home town, and she very much enjoyed the club privileges of the Sans Souci and Palmetto club meetings.

Sans Souci Club Meeting—

The Sans Souci club met with Mrs. A. J. Beardsley on Halifax avenue, Thursday afternoon, 18 ladies present. Mrs. G. H. Sheets and Mrs. C. L. Watkins were in charge of the program, which was a very interesting one, given by Miss Lucile Stanley Mitchell, principal of the department of domestic science in the Daytona high school. Miss Mitchell exhibited samples of the work of the pupils of the school, done under her direction. Many questions were asked and answered, and those present were very much pleased with Miss Mitchell's lecture.

A Much Needed Utility—

At the last meeting of the town council, a permit was granted W. R. Phillips for the erection of a steam laundry on lot 6, Seabreeze avenue, which is the lot adjoining and west of the Phillips apartment house. The building will cost from $2500 to $3000. This is a much needed utility on the peninsula and will receive a large patronage.

Miss Bessie Justice who has been spending a month at Lake Helen, is expected here this week, but will probably spend the summer north.

Mrs. C. W. Tippyson and friend, Mrs. W. H. Deacon, who have been occupying one of the Beardsley cottages, left Friday morning for their home in Jackson, Mich. They will make several stops enroute.

News has reached here of the birth of a son, who arrived early in April, to Mr. and Mrs. Kirby Smith at their home in Jacksonville. Mr. Smith, who was reared here, has many friends in this vicinity.

S. H. Armour, of Toronto, Canada, registered at the Palm for a few days' stay.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Edw. Rector will regret to learn that he is very sick at his home on Peninsula drive. A bad attack of asthma, to which Mr. Rector is subject, has developed into pneumonia.

Mrs. W. S. Cushman, of New Haven, Conn., has returned home, called north earlier than she had planned to go by business. Mr. Cushman, who is employed on the construction of the E. L. King handsome winter home, expects to be here all summer.

Dreams.

It is a common saying that one dreams of that which one has been thinking most about. This is the exception and not the rule. The dream may be of something that one thought of at some time, but possibly not for years, that would not be recalled in waking hours, which had lain dormant in the mind, to be prosaically rehearsed through some operation of physical functions, such as impeded respiration, feverish conditions, some posture of the body, a late supper, possibly ended with a dessert of mince pie, stomachic distress, clogging of the circulation or some bodily pain.

A Flood of Wine.

The Argentinians are a wine-drinking nation. The natives are of Spanish descent and are accustomed to having wine with their meals. The immigrants, who have come in by the millions and who form perhaps one-half of the population, are mostly Italians and Spaniards, all of whom drink wine every day. All of the small Italian farmers have their own wine supply and every one who can afford it lays in a number of casks for his own use.

Baby Knew Another Song.

The most embarrassing moments of my life, writes a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, were one day while I was entertaining the minister, and wishing to display the sweet voice and really excellent memory of my little three-year-old, I coaxed her to sing the little song I had taught her, namely, "Baby's Boat's a Silver Moon." I had overlooked the fact, however, that the baby's father had taken her to the vaudeville show the other day, and consequently was greatly horrified when the lifted her little skirts and, capering about with an impish look, rattled out: "He's a debbil; he's a debbil in his own home town."

Righteously Indignant.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PARADE SUCCESS

EXCELLENT PARADE HELD SUNDAY AFTERNOON BY MEMBERS CLASSES OF CHURCHES OF DAYTONA AND KINGSTON.

(From The Daytona Gazette-News)

The union Sunday school parade in this city on Sunday afternoon was a decided success and was participated in by about 300 members of the Sunday schools of the Baptist, Christian, Congregational, First Methodist and Kingston Methodist churches which appeared in the parade in the order named.

The parade was led by E. H. Shoemaker, superintendent of the Volusia county Sunday School association, on foot and carrying a large United States flag. There were class banners and flags in great profusion.

The parade started from the Congregational church, at the corner of Volusia and Palmetto avenues, went west on Bay street to Ridgewood avenue east on Live Oak avenue to Palmetto and north on that avenue to the place of beginning, where the assemblage disbanded.

The start was made from the point stated at shortly after 3:00 p. m., and the paraders marched on the sidewalk on the right side of the street, while a dozen or more automobiles, also containing Sunday school members, kept beside them in the street.

The parade made quite a fine appearance and demonstrated the strength of the Sunday schools of this city and their interest in the work.

An Old College for Girls.

One of the oldest schools for girls on the American continent is the Colegio de la Paz in Mexico City. This was founded by wealthy Spaniards in 1732 for the benefit of the children of the poorer classes. The building was designed after the royal palace in Madrid and covers nearly five acres of ground. The original name was the Colegio de San Ignacio. About eight hundred girls are usually in the college under a staff of 45 teachers.

Weeping Willows.

The weeping willows, so-called (scientific name S. babylonica), is a native of China, from which country it has been taken over most of the civilized earth. It varies in height and dimensions, according to climate and soil, and invariably maintains its drooping habit, the chief cause of its attractiveness.

Grumbling.

It is the easiest thing in the world to be dissatisfied. Anyone can do it, as the phrase goes, without thinking. But those who really think must agree with Amiel, the philosopher. He counsels thus: "Despise not your situation. In it you must act, suffer and conquer. From every point on earth we are equally near to heaven and the infinite."

Lucas Deception.

A neighbor had a parrot and a dog named Mac. The mistress did not allow Mac in the house unless she called him. Mac could open the screen door, but seldom did so, as he was whipped when he did. It amused Polly much to see Mac whipped. Polly could imitate the voice of the mistress perfectly. One day Mac was whipped for entering and shut out again. He came in again, then the third time, each time receiving his punishment and being sent out again. The mistress could not understand why Mac was so unruly, so she did not return to her work, but waited. What was her surprise to hear a voice say, "Come in, Mac. Poor Mac, come in, Mac." It was Polly calling Mac to see him punished and sent out again.

Surgery in the Air.

Sitting astride a steel beam on the highest section of a new theater under construction a doctor recently chloroformed a structural ironworker, and snipped into place the bones of a dislocated shoulder. When the accident occurred the workman was left helpless, as both arms were disabled, and there was no means of descent except a series of ladders. The doctor removed his hat, coat and vest, and began the dangerous ascent. A workman followed with the doctor's surgical case. After the operation the workman was able to make his way down the ladder and was taken to his home.

FLORIDA CITRUS EXCHANGE

It came to pass several weeks ago that the Florida Citrus Exchange controlled the major portion of the fruit remaining in the State—for the first time in the history of the organization.

Almost immediately prices became good and they have been maintained since at a satisfactory level. The lesson is obvious and justifies the faith of the founders of the Exchange that what has happened would take place whenever the Exchange had the marketing of more than half of the fruit.

The Florida Citrus Exchange can continue to get good prices for the growers so long as they let it handle the greater portion of the crop. Therefore it asks that they entrust it with the marketing of sixty per cent or more of the citrus fruit produced in the State for the coming season that it may keep on doing this.

It is the plan of the Exchange to carry on even more aggressively its splendid advertising to increase consumer demand for Florida oranges and grapefruit. This season it has opened up many markets in which Florida fruit never before was sold. By still further extending this line of effort, the Exchange proposes to sell a much larger proportion of the fruit outside of auctions.

Growers now can join the Exchange with the privilege of having the local Association sell their fruit in carload lots at the packing house to buyers whenever these offer satisfactory prices. Any grower may terminate his contract with the Exchange at the end of shipping season. Won't you join under these conditions? If so, fill out and sign this blank, mailing it to the general offices in Tampa.

I will join the Exchange for the season of 1915-16 on the terms set forth above.

Plenty of Other Ways

A boxing professor was giving his pupil a few tips, when suddenly he gave a knockdown blow. Pupil—"Is it necessary to knock me down like that?" Professor—"Bless yer, no, governor. Get up and I'll show yer ten other ways."

Modern Education.

A boxing school principal lately told us some of the answers found in pupils' examination papers. Here are two of them: "What is a volcano?" "A volcano is a mountain that sometimes blows the equator off." "What is the difference between a mountain and a hill?" "A hill is like a mountain, only a mountain is a little more hillier."

The "Forty Immortals" are those constituting the membership of the French Academy, the most eminent of the five academies known together as the Institute of France. It was founded in 1635 by the celebrated Richelieu and reorganized in 1816. Its forty members, after the strictest examination, are elected for life. It meets twice weekly at the Palace Masarin and is the highest authority on everything literary in the country. A hall in the academy is the highest ambition of all literary Frenchmen.

And What Could He Answer?

One Sunday morning Mr Moody, the revivalist, entered a Chicago drug store, distributing tracts. At the back of the store sat an elderly and distinguished citizen reading a morning newspaper. Mr Moody approached this gentleman and threw one of the temperance tracts upon the paper before him. The old gentleman glanced at the tract, and then, looking up benignantly at Moody, asked: "Are you a reformed drunkard?" "No, sir, I am not," cried Moody, drawing back, indignantly. "Then why don't you reform?" quietly asked the old gentleman.

Unless Properly Packed, Fruit Will Not Bring Top Prices

The marketing of Florida's citrus fruit crop so that it will be profitable largely depends upon the manner in which the fruit is packed. No matter how carefully grown, sprayed and protected in the grove, fruit that is not properly prepared and packed will not bring top prices.

Under normal conditions next season's crop of oranges and grapefruit will be much larger than that of this year. The grower who sends first-quality fruit to the market will again be the man with a big bank account. There will be demand for the best, no matter how great the volume.

Skinner's "Satisfaction Guaranteed" Packing House Machinery Gives Good Fruit the Touch of Quality That Makes it Sell

Anticipating a greater demand than ever for machinery of this kind to be installed in houses now standing and others soon to be erected, we have enlarged our Dunedin plant and this year hope to be prepared to fill all orders.

Future profits in citrus culture depend upon efficient packing house equipment as much as anything else. Skinner's "Satisfaction Guaranteed" machinery has demonstrated that it is a paying proposition to growers of good fruit. We will gladly furnish information, catalogs and other information.

MATANZAS TO MAKE TWO TRIPS WEEKLY, FORT PIERCE-DAYTONA

(From The Daytona Gazette-News)

The freight boat Matanzas, which for a month or more made weekly round trips between Fort Pierce and Jacksonville inaugurated a twice-a-week schedule this week, beginning Monday. Hereafter the Matanzas will make semi-weekly round trips between Fort Pierce and Daytona, at the latter place transferring her cargo to boats of the Howard Transportation company.

Because new engines were being installed in the Matanzas, she made no trip last week.

Joy in Service.

A life lived for self can never be good nor great. There is only one way to save a life and that is to lose it in service to others. Every child is entitled to a chance "to do the things" which he is able to do for others. Service of this kind brings home the highest joy as the years come and go. It is true, this "doing" affords in childhood days an outlet for physical energy; but better than that it forms the habit of living for others, which will some day prove to be a fountain of perennial joy to him.

An Ingenious Courtship

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

Mrs. Martindale, realizing the dangers which beset young persons who step into matrimonial traps, desired that her daughter should be settled matrimonially while her mother lived and that she should marry a good man. Edward Sawyer was the person on whom Mrs. Martindale had fixed her intentions for her daughter. One day she said to him:

"Edward, I have noticed that you seem pleased with Gwen. I wish to see her settled before I leave her. If you wish to marry her I will help you to win her. If not, I shall try to make a match for her elsewhere."

"You have not been deceived in my partiality for Gwen, Mrs. Martindale, but I don't see that Gwen has any special partiality for me."

"Gwen is romantic and needs to be won by romance. That is why I fear for her. Some worthless fellow is liable to appeal to her in that way and marry her. I value that which is practical in you and wish that you might sink it temporarily, be a bit sentimental, catch Gwen and marry her. After marriage I am sure your good sense and wisdom will hold her."

Mrs. Sawyer sat evidently turning something over in his mind, then assured Mrs. Martindale that, although he would be glad to win her daughter, he feared that he was too matter of fact to please her.

One day Gwen received a note which put her in a flutter. The writer declared that he had known her for some time; that he had loved her from the moment he first saw her; that he had forborne to give her the slightest inkling of his affection because he had not observed any predisposition on her part for him. He was a believer in love from the beginning. He knew the woman he wanted the moment he met her and felt sure that if she wanted him she would know him. While he would not make himself known, he could not refrain from telling her that he loved her.

In a few weeks came a second letter. In it her correspondent said that he was impelled to write to her, though he had no information of himself to communicate. He had met her once since he had written the first letter, but had observed nothing in her greeting to give him any reason to think that she had chosen him as he had chosen her. Nevertheless he had a faint hope that there might be some subtle medium of transference which would enable his love to kindle its like in her.

Whether or not this medium existed, Gwen's heart went out to this unknown lover, or, rather, to a being whom she created. She was troubled that he did not enable her to make even a written reply by giving her an address. But one day she received a letter in which he said that he was ill and was pining for a word from her. If he did not get it he feared for the result. An address was given, but she was assured that she would not be able, even if she desired, to trace him.

Gwen did not find the difficulty to be expected in writing a reply, because she wrote to one created by her own fancy. She did not intend to write a loving letter to an unknown man. She thought she merely expressed sympathy. But sympathy is so nearly akin to love that the expression of the one will often do for the other.

The stranger having given an address where a letter might reach him, quite a brisk correspondence sprang up between him and Gwen. She suggested that he make himself known, that if they could not be lovers they might at least be friends, and she longed to do something to show her appreciation of his preference for her. To this he replied that he was sure that when she knew which of her acquaintances he was, that he was a plain, ordinary man, she could not refrain from showing her disappointment. Nor would she believe that one she had known could have so long concealed the love buried away down in his breast.

To this she replied that such a discovery could not but interest her and might turn the scale in his favor. After much urging and the expression of many misgivings he consented to make himself known. He agreed to call upon her on a certain evening. When that evening arrived she spent much time before her glass arranging her costume, and when she heard the ring of the doorbell her heart leaped into her throat. She went downstairs, trembling with anticipation.

"Why, Ned Sawyer!"

Sawyer shrank back as though fearing she was about to cast a blight upon him.

"Can it be," Gwen added, a slight color rising in her cheeks, "that you have so long lived near me, have seen me so often and yet have been able to conceal what you have expressed in those lovely letters?"

"Oh, Gwen, tell me, are you—do you wish I had turned out to be some one else?"

"Why, Ned, do you mean to tell me that you haven't known that I—"

He clasped her to his breast. "No; had I even suspected it I would not have wasted so much time on this confounded—"

He checked himself in time to prevent spelling what he had accomplished.

PRESENTMENTS OF VOLUSIA GRAND JURY TO CIRCUIT COURT

To the Honorable James W. Perkins, Judge of the Seventh Judicial circuit of Florida in and for Volusia county:

Your grand jury for the spring term A. D. 1915, of the circuit-court of Volusia county, Florida, beg leave to report that we have finished our duties and make this final presentment:

We, as jurors, have been mindful of our oaths and have carefully looked into all matters brought before us, as our duty is, and hope that no guilty person may escape and that no innocent person may suffer.

We have carefully inspected the county jail and found that institution in perfect order and thoroughly clean in all its appointments. We found, however, that a small part of the plumbing system is defective, not being large enough to carry away the waste, and we would recommend to the court that the authorities who have charge of these matters be directed to make such changes as will make said plumbing system perfectly sanitary.

We have also inspected the poor house and would recommend that there be provided for that institution 3 screen doors, 2 screen windows, 1 linen closet and a deep well pump, the present pump being entirely inadequate.

The county offices we found in excellent order and entirely satisfactory.

We wish to thank the Court, his honor, James W. Perkins, and all officers of the court for their assistance in all matters required of them; and especially do we desire to express our appreciation of the unflinching courtesy and efficient assistance rendered by our state's attorney, the Honorable Joseph H. Jones, during our deliberations.

All of which we respectfully submit and now ask that if it is the pleasure of the Court, we be discharged for the term.

R. J. BISHOP, Foreman.

GEO. E. ACKROYD, Clerk.

Slavery Originated in the East.
Absolute slavery seems to have appeared in the eastern colonies somewhat earlier than in the southern, for slavery existed in New York in 1628, in New Jersey in 1628, in Massachusetts in 1630, in Connecticut in 1631 and in Delaware in 1638. There was a statutory recognition of slavery in Massachusetts in 1641, which was considerably ahead of such recognition of slavery in Virginia or Maryland.

Danger of Lockjaw in Felt.
That commercial gelatin, charcoal and other substances useful in medicine and surgery may contain the germs of lockjaw is well known. Quite recently it was found that felt so commonly used in orthopedic retentive dressings may also contain these germs in abundance. Two patients who had been treated at a German hospital lost their lives as a result of infection from the felt plates used to make a retention support.

Wrong Position for Sleep.
Sleep cannot knit up the raveled sleeve of care or do any other reparative knitting, if the head is bent sharply to an acute angle with the collar joints. Frequently men and women who have slept in this supposedly objectionable fashion for years and years suddenly lose the capacity for sleep with no new discoverable reason. It is difficult to convince them that the elasticity and resiliency of youth has heretofore made up for their lifelong awkward pose.

Chauvinism.
A chauvinist is one who is absurdly jealous of his country's honor or puffed up with an exaggerated sense of national glory. The words "chauvinist" and "chauvinism" are taken from the name of Nicolas Chauvin, a soldier of Napoleon, who was so notorious for his exaggerated and demonstrative devotion to the imperial cause that he was caricatured on the stage, and his name came to stand for all people who work mischief by their unreasoning, frangible and vainglorious patriotism.

Wily Chinese.
A friend of mine, says a correspondent of the London Chronicle, has just returned from a remote part of China, where he has been laying a railway. He tells me the big difficulty was the graves of Chinamen, over which, of course, no railway is supposed to run. At the outset it looked as if his line, in avoiding these, would become "straighter than a corkscrew, but not so straight as a rainbow." Then he conceived the notion of buying up graves that lay on the coming line of route. The wily Chinese were equal to him, for they dug up the bones of their ancestors and planted them ahead, right in the line of advance. My friend fears that often he paid three times for the same old bones; but ultimately he completed the railway, which now runs in a fairly straight line, except for the first mile or two.

EYES OF THE BLIND

By JOHN CAMERON.

(Copyright, 1914, by W. G. Chapman.)

Everybody in Erpingham pitied Dorothy Lee. She was a sweet girl, and it was agreed that it was a great pity she was so homely. "It ain't a fair handicap," said old Mrs. Howell, who kept the post office. "It's hard enough for a girl to get married in New England, anyway, but with her looks—I say it ain't fair."

Dorothy's father probably indorsed this view, but the hard-headed old farmer was too practical a man to worry about his daughter's looks.

Dorothy lived alone with him, her mother being dead. What she thought on the subject she never disclosed. She must have known, however, that there was a reason why she was always a wall-flower at parties and was never invited on picnics and such festivities.

When she was twenty-five Tom Lanark came home after an absence of six years in the West.

"Fabulous stories preceded him. He had found a gold mine in Nevada, one of the richest in the world, it was said, and the glare of the sun on the alkali plains had seared his eyeballs until he could only distinguish light from darkness. So he had come back at thirty, to resume life—no, not to resume it, but to take up its burden alone in the old house that had given him birth."

Margaret Barnett had been an old flame of Tom's in the bygone days. But if there was any idea that she would link her life to a blind man's Margaret, who was "running" with the banker's son, dismissed it promptly.

"I want a live one when I get married," she said. And Dorothy witnessed a snubbing which Margaret administered to Tom in the street, in front of her house.

She saw the blind man trying to peer after the girl whose shrill, scornful laughter echoed through the quiet street, and an excess of pity overcame her shrinking, and she hurried out.

"Mr. Lanark," she said quickly, conscious that her words were almost beyond her control, "I am Dorothy Lee. Don't you remember me?"

Tom Lanark felt for her hands and took them in his. "Indeed I do," he answered warmly. "I have often thought of you since I have been away."

"I think it was a shame the way Margaret Barnett spoke to you," declared Dorothy indignantly.

"Ah, well, one lives and finds out these things," replied the blind man wearily.

After that Tom fell into the habit of dropping into the old farmer's place of an afternoon, and on one occasion he actually drove up in a buggy.

"I thought I'd ask you to come for a drive with me, Miss Dorothy," he explained. "I was sure I knew the way down the street to here, and that you'd do the rest—if you are willing to do an act of kindness for a blind man."

"O, I should love to go driving with you," the girl answered. She ran upstairs to change her frock, and, five minutes later, the village was speculating over the appearance of Dorothy and Tom, driving down the road into the country and chatting as merrily as though they were old friends—which, indeed, they might have been called.

But during the return Dorothy became very pensive. For she knew that her heart had turned very strongly in the direction of the blind man, and that he, too, as her woman's instinct told her, was by no means indifferent to her.

And when they neared the town he suddenly placed his arm around her and drew her toward him.

"Do you think you can ever learn to care for a blind man, Dorothy?" he asked.

It was a tremulous figure, shrinking and nerved only by intense resolution, that went to Tom's door that night, fearful of discovery by the prying eyes of the town, yet spurred on by the sense of tremendous necessity. And, after she had knocked, she could hardly make her knees support her, and clung to the door-jamb for support.

The door opened. Tom peered out. Then:

"I can't marry you," the girl was sobbing wildly. "You have never seen me as I am, Tom. You don't know—"

"Don't know what, dear?" asked Tom's quiet voice. She felt his hands on her shoulders, but she could not see him through the gathering tears.

"I am the homeliest girl in Erpingham," cried Dorothy. "If ever you saw me you would be ashamed of me, Tom. And I can't marry you and not let you know; and I can't marry you and let you be ashamed of me."

She was beyond all self-control. She was weeping in his arms. She heard Tom's voice between his kisses.

"Dorothy, you are the prettiest girl in Erpingham, and it wouldn't make any difference to me anyway," he said, "because I love you. Now I will tell you something, dear. I am not quite so blind as people think—in fact the doctor says that in a few months more I may see as well as ever. Sometimes a man may pretend to be blind, Dorothy, in order to know his real friends from his false ones."

MISS ALICE GERSTENBERG

One of the youthful and extremely promising novelists and dramatists is Miss Alice Gerstenberg. After spending three years at Bryn Mawr college she decided that she wanted some "real work," as she sincerely put it, and launched into the literary field. As an author Miss Gerstenberg is not unknown to the American public, her "Unquenched Fire" and "The Conscience of Sarah Platt" having been favorably received.

In the dramatic field Miss Gerstenberg is known to the theater-goers by her "Alice in Wonderland" and the "Model Maid."

With all these activities in the literary field Miss Gerstenberg finds time to belong to many clubs in her home city, Chicago. Still she is the most modest and unassuming little person in the world.

HOW THE KAISER APPEARS

Correspondent Writes Pen Picture of Emperor as He Saw Him at Front.

Berlin.—A pen picture of the kaiser appears in the Kreuz-Zeitung from its war correspondent with the German troops in Poland, who says: "The kaiser appeared with General Mackensen, and passed along in front of the officers and troops. I had not seen him since the time when at the beginning of the war he spoke to the crowd from the balcony of the castle in Berlin."

"For one moment I had formed the impression that he had become terribly gray in the campaign. That, however, was an error, which arose from the fact that his head protector, which he was wearing owing to the extremely cold weather, was gray."

"The supreme war lord appears, on the contrary, extraordinarily fresh and elastic, even though the seriousness of these last months has left marks on his features, and a certain bitterness which formerly was not present comes into his voice when he speaks."

"When I saw him I could not help thinking of the kaiser parade in 1895 on the Spandau drill ground. How brilliant he then looked, how forceful, how confident in the future and victory!"

AUSTRIAN BAR IN PROTEST

Object to Restraining Refugee Lawyers of Galicia and Bukovina From Practicing.

Vienna.—A committee of the Austrian Bar association has recently drawn up a vigorous protest against the enactments of the government restraining the refugee lawyers of Galicia and Bukovina from the practice of their profession in lower Austria. The representations of the committee, which has behind it not only the prominent lawyers of Vienna, but of all the Austrian crownlands, received instant and hearty indorsement from the bar. The Austrian Bar association repudiated all sympathy with the illiberal policy of the state authorities, and by a three-quarters vote of its members, put itself on record against the proceedings disbarring its colleagues from Galicia and Bukovina. Public opinion, too, keenly alive to the fact that the government is imposing disabilities on a part of its population which is suffering for its sake, is in emphatic accord with the stand of the lawyer's committee.

"SOLOMON" ENDS BABY CASE

This Time in Person of New York Lawyer—He Foregoes the Sword.

New York.—May a child be held for board unpaid?

The question was asked of Magistrate Barlow, when Mrs. May Berghard, whose baby was born last August, summoned to court Mrs. Minnie Curtis because she had refused to give up the child until Mrs. Berghard paid $10 arrears of board for the baby.

On consulting the court Bible, Magistrate Barlow, in emulation of King Solomon in a similar case, glanced about for the state sword which should have been behind his chair. The court stenographer had taken it away to sharpen his pencil, and in default of anything bigger than a paper cutter Magistrate Barlow threw biblical instructions to the winds, and gave the child back to its mother.

BUNKOED BY A GREEK

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The pair of us had been in Athens three or four days when a party of English excursionists who were making a tour arrived. Among them was an antiquary who was looked up to and respected for his knowledge of ancient history and ruins.

Professor Himstead, as he was named, had been charged to pick up all the old Greek manuscripts to be had for money, and it was his inquiries for such documents that doubtless led to our undoing. One day a man named Talanti, who had somewhat the manners and dress of a gentleman, brought the professor two ancient manuscripts as a present, and to show his further good will he announced a valuable discovery which had just been made on the island of Aegina, about forty miles distant. He was the owner of the island, and while his workmen were getting out some stone they had come across some rare treasures in art, but had developed only a small portion of them. They had partly uncovered a stone box which he believed held a large number of manuscripts and valuable coins, but he had delayed the opening of it that some of his friends might be present. Three or four of them were going to his island home tomorrow, and he would be glad to have on his yacht as many of us foreigners go along as could make it convenient.

Aside from the English party, there were Americans, Germans and Frenchmen to the number of twenty in Athens, and when the list was made up we numbered over forty, of whom ten were ladies. When we went on board there was considerable surprise at finding her the craft she was. She was nothing more than a trader, and her accommodations were of a primitive character.

My friend the professor could speak Greek, but when he entered into conversation with Mr. Talanti's friends he found them sulky enough. This excited our surprise, as they were supposed to be gentlemen. When we came to look them over we began to get a little suspicious.

As we approached the island we saw it was fairly covered with trees, yet it did not have a hospitable look. As we made a close approach we could see a couple of rude huts and a primitive jetty, but Mr. Talanti explained that his castle was hidden by the forest and that he was landing at that point to save us a long walk.

As soon as the craft was made fast the three eminent friends of Mr. Talanti suddenly produced pistols and knives and took their station by the gangway. The sailors divided into two parties, and, handling their naked knives in a menacing fashion, they drove the people into line.

When Professor Himstead had rubbed his eyes, scratched his head and got it into his brain that something not down on the program was going on Talanti mounted a box and smilingly observed:

"Ladies and gentlemen, you are now about to pass ashore to behold my wonderful discoveries, but each one of you is required to leave all money and jewelry behind you. I will see that everything is safely cared for!"

The men cried out in anger, but what could they do? I do not think there was a firearm among them, while the Greeks seemed overanxious to use their knives. There were protestations and threats of the law, but Talanti only smiled at them and ordered the work to go on. Each man in the crowd was regularly held up—that is, his pockets were thoroughly searched and everything of value taken. The women were requested to hand over, and each one had her watch and rings in hand as she moved up. In the course of half an hour every one was ashore, and then Talanti took off his hat, made a sweeping bow and sailed away with his piratical crew. He had no sooner gone than half a dozen villainous looking men came down from the hut.

They told us they were fishermen, but their actions belied their statement. Their first move was to demand cash, and great was their indignation and disappointment at being told that Talanti's crowd had taken the last coin. When sure of this they left us, and an hour later two genuine fishermen came ashore in their boat. There were a dozen vessels within five or six miles of us, and a dollar would have been big pay for them to go out and notify the nearest one of our situation; but, realizing our helplessness, they demanded the sum of $100.

It was almost dark when a battered old schooner came sailing up to take us off, and the terms were $2 a piece, to be paid in Athens. We spent a dreary night on deck and landed in the city at noon next day. Immediately notice was given to the various consuls and to the Greek government, but no one had any faith that anything would be accomplished. The government made loud promises and seemed to be making all possible efforts; but, as a matter of fact, Mr. Talanti was not even pursued. He never could have put up such a job without a number of officials standing in with him, and each and every one of them doubtless shared in the plunder when it was divided. It was said that the money and jewelry amounted to about $6,000, and the only consolation any of the victims had was the privilege of abusing a country where such things could be carried out.

BIGGEST WARSHIP MAY NOT LONG HOLD THAT DISTINCTION

WASHINGTON, April 21. — The United States superdreadnaught, Pennsylvania, launched by the Newport Shipbuilding company a few weeks ago, when completed, will be the largest and most powerful fighting machine afloat.

How long will she hold that title? From present indications, not long. Already ordnance experts are beginning to think in larger units. When the keel of Uncle Sam's next superdreadnaught is laid, the belief now is that there will be included in her equipment a new feature.

This new feature promises to revolutionize the marine ordnance of the United States navy and will be the biggest step yet taken in the perfecting of the superdreadnaught type of battleship.

It is the new type of naval gun, 16-inch calibre—greater by one inch than the much-heralded guns of the powerful British superdreadnaught of the Queen Elizabeth class.

Experiments with this type of gun are, and for some time have been, underway by the ordnance officers at the naval proving grounds at Indian Head, Md.

The United States navy for years has religiously adhered to the 14-inch gun. They thought it filled the bill in all respects and didn't want any other. But the European war has taught lessons and the value of large calibre guns is one of them.

So successful have the experiments proven, thus far, that it is confidently predicted that the ordnance officers of the navy department will recommend the installation of this type of gun on the two dreadnaughts authorized by the last congress.

Should this style of equipment be extended also to the dreadnaughts California, Idaho and Mississippi, authorized last year, a complete division of 16-inch gun battleships would be available. This would make the most formidable unit afloat.

All tests of this type of weapon are carefully guarded, but it is said that the new gun is about forty-eight feet long and the weight of the projectile hurled is approximately 2,000 pounds.

A vessel mounting a full complement of these guns for its main battery—four turrets of three guns each—could hurl a broadside of about 24,000 pounds, or twelve tons.

This is about 10,400 pounds more than a broadside from the eight 16-inch guns of the British superdreadnaught Queen Elizabeth.

It is the work of this ship that the experts here are watching with the utmost care and the effectiveness of her ordnance will go a great way toward deciding the difference now existing between the two schools of naval armament.

Wonderful Cuban Caves.

The wonderful caves of Beikamar, Cuba, to the east of Havana, attract the attention of the ambitious tourist. They are on a plateau as level as a table top, which presents no signs of the existence of such caves. After descending into the earth, however, a picture unfolds itself. Then come many passages, and at last the great "Gothic temple," 250 feet long and 80 feet wide.

PROPOSITION TO HAVE BOTH WATERWORKS AND SEWER SYSTEMS READY BY OCT. 1

McCrary Company Makes Offer to Council and Board of Public Works to Follow Specifications and Do Construction Work on a Basis of a Percentage and Rush Work

Complete plans and specifications for the proposed waterworks and sewer systems to be installed in this city were brought here this week by Chas. C. Cook, chief engineer for the J. B. McCrary company, and Geo. C. Pierce, representative of the company, and were presented to the city council and board of public works at a joint meeting of those bodies held Tuesday night.

Advertisements for the sale of the bonds are now being published, the advertisements calling for the bids to be opened June 1, and immediately after this bids will be asked on the plans and specifications as prepared by the McCrary company.

The adjourned session of the city council and the joint session with the members of the board of public works was held Tuesday night for the purpose of receiving the specifications from the engineering company, and these specifications were thoroughly explained by Mr. Cook, the reading and explanations taking up the time until the lights went out at midnight, when the session was adjourned to meet again tonight.

The plans submitted by the company are the same as the ones submitted after the surveys and estimates had been made and before the bond election was held in January, and as have been explained in these columns before. The specifications are more detailed than the ones previously submitted, being prepared expressly for the guidance of contractors in bidding on the construction work, and explaining in detail the kind of buildings to be erected, the machinery to be installed, the sizes and kinds of pipe to be laid, etc.

Just before the adjournment of the joint session Mr. Pierce, as a representative of the McCrary company, presented a proposition, similar to one presented before, that the McCrary company will guarantee to take the issue of bonds at par, and also take the issue of bonds on property for the payment of two-thirds of the cost of sewer installation, if the council and board of public work will contract with the McCrary company to do the construction work on a profit percentage basis. The company proposes to act as purchasing agent for the city in purchasing materials, and guarantees that the total cost of installation of the systems of waterworks and sewers will not be more than the guaranteed estimates previously furnished by the company, and any less cost than this will be saved to the city.

The company also agrees, if this contract is accepted by the council and board of public works, to have the construction work finished and both systems completely installed by the first of October.

This proposed contract will be taken up by the two bodies at the adjourned meeting tonight and further discussed by the members.

OFFICERS ARE CHOSEN

BY FIRE DEPARTMENT.

At a meeting of the New Smyrna fire department, held Wednesday evening this week, the following officers were re-elected to serve during the ensuing year:

Chief—F. A. Newell.
Assistant Chief—F. L. Moore.
Secretary—V. A. Newell.
Treasurer—E. J. Rogero.

The remaining officers of the various companies will be chosen at a future meeting.

The trustees were asked to fill the vacancy on that board by appointment.

W. H. Gilmore and Gordon Ferreira were elected to membership in the department.

By the action of the department the automobile truck, which has been in the equipment for some time, has been discarded and the hose placed on a one-horse wagon until some other arrangement can be made to handle the hose. The 30-gallon chemical has been taken off the truck and placed on two wheels as before, and the secretary was instructed to notify E. J. Rogero that the fire department does not wish to keep the truck as a part of the equipment, and that it is left in the fire station subject to his order.

A proposal to move the apparatus to the garage now occupied by Zipper & Patch on Downing street was discussed. Mr. Zipper proposed to rent one-half of the building to the department for the same rent now being paid by the department. F. L. Moore and K. L. Childton were appointed as a committee to take this matter up with the trustee and council and ask for authority to move the equipment to the new location.

As the department is now without a hose cart, a campaign is to be started at once to get a motor-driven fire truck.

Must Face Criminal Charge
Charles J. Brown, who is charged with a "train wreck" was before Justice Newell Wednesday and bound over to the criminal court for trial. Bond was fixed at $200. The complaint was F. M. Salia, an old man with whom Brown got up in the night, took $151 from Salia's pockets and gave to O. K. Hill, where he was later located by Deputy Sheriff Brooks and brought back here for trial.

HAWKS PARK COUPLE

MARRIED AT DELAND.

At the Episcopal church rectory in Deland at 1 o'clock last Saturday afternoon Alexander MacLean, Jr., and Miss Hester Franks were united in marriage, the ceremony being performed in the presence of Mrs. MacLean and her daughter, Miss Lilian, Mrs. Vrooman, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Vrooman and Donald Murray.

The wedding party made the trip from this city to the county seat for the ceremony and returned to Hawks Park immediately afterward.

The groom is a son of Alexander MacLean, Sr., and has been coming to Hawks Park for the winter seasons for a number of years. He is well known in Hawks Park and New Smyrna. The bride is from Muskegon, Mich., and came to Hawks Park last fall with Mrs. March II and her daughter. She has made many friends during her stay here.

Mr. and Mrs. MacLean will remain at Hawks Park through the summer and will leave next fall for the west to make their home.

The newly married couple were given a reception Monday night, attended by a large number of their friends, who suddenly appeared at their home, which proved too small to accommodate the large crowd and an adjournment was taken to the village hall, where Mr. and Mrs. MacLean were presented with a quantity of silverware, the presentation being made by I. S. Crawford. Following this an impromptu program was rendered, consisting of instrumental music by Miss Beryl Murray, recitations by Mrs. Ilistop and vocal solos by C. W. Murray. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

MRS. SARAH CLARK WEDD'D TO HENRY TOWNSEND.

At the parsonage of the Methodist church in Daytona Tuesday, April 20, Mrs. Sarah Clark of New Smyrna and Henry Townsend of Daytona were united in marriage, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. J. H. Elder. Mrs. Townsend has been a resident of New Smyrna for many years and has lots of friends here who wish her joy in her wedding. They will make their home on Arlington avenue, Daytona.

Mrs. Martha Sygus, who has spent the winter at the home of her son, C. L. Berger, left today for her home in New Jersey.

WHY NOT ALL TOGETHER BY ONE PLAN?

The Florida Citrus Exchange is not an experiment. It has already conclusively demonstrated its value to its members as well as the fruit growers of the state who are not members. Certainly these non-members must know that their cooperation is needed to make the work of the exchange more effective.

Here is a mutual association organized without the idea of financial profit in the shape of interest or dividends, for the benefit of the citrus fruit growers of Florida. It has been in successful operation for several years. It has had much to do toward preventing the shipment of immature fruit, which invariably kills the demand on northern markets for one of Florida's finest products. It has had good laws passed to improve conditions for the Florida fruit grower. It has raised the standard of grading and packing citrus fruits until it equals that of any competition. It has secured concessions from transportation companies through its efficient traffic department where individual effort would be ignored. Through its capable management in its grading, packing, transportation and marketing it has secured better prices for its grower-members than they would have otherwise enjoyed and at the same time, as a direct result of its influence, Florida fruit has gained a better reputation and growers who are non-members have benefited correspondingly.

The business affairs of the Florida Citrus exchange are handled by a corps of experts who understand and carry out the details of the industry from the nursery to the market. The wonderful results that they have accomplished in spite of difficulties and obstacles have all been brought about at a cost of only a few cents per box to each member.

In spite of all this there are still hundreds of citrus fruit growers in Florida who are not members of the exchange—who will not join hands

WEATHER FORECAST

For the week beginning Wednesday, April 20, 1915.

Issued by the United States Weather Bureau, Washington, D. C.
For South Atlantic and East Gulf States:

Except for local showers at its beginning in the east Gulf states, the week will be one of generally fair weather with temperatures above the normal.

with their neighbors for their own good.

It is a pleasure, however, to record the fact that the membership in the exchange is steadily growing and the day is not far distant when 50 percent or more of the citrus fruit crop of Florida will be graded and packed under the supervision of and marketed through the Florida Citrus exchange.

We don't know how to put this up stronger to you, Mr. Grower, but if you can carefully consider the past record of the exchange, without prejudice, surely your course will be clear to you and you will lose no time in affiliating with this organization that was established for your benefit—Florida Farmer and Home-seeker.

Gossip of the Town

by the
Town Gossiper

I understand the city council has given another 60-days order—this time on the buildings at the foot of Lytle avenue—but the building at Faulkner and Julia streets remains and the people are still wondering how long is 60 days.

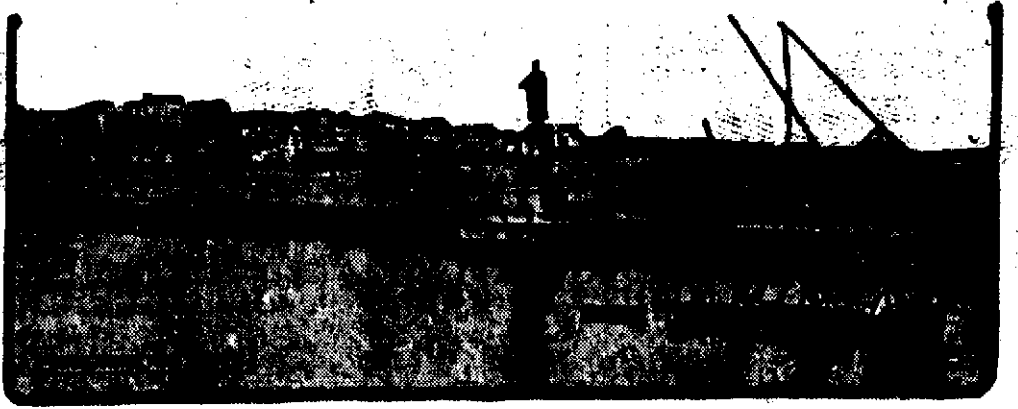

I see by the reports of the recent meeting that W. S. Hart of Hawks Park has again been chosen treasurer of the State Horticultural society and the members of the organization may be assured the funds of the society will be as carefully looked after this year as they were when Mr. Hart took up the duties of that office, which he has satisfactorily filled every year since. Reports from over the state are that much credit is due Mr. Hart for the whole-hearted support he has given the society in the 13 years he has served as its treasurer. He has carefully looked after the funds when there were any and met the needs when there were no funds. It is a thankless job at the most, but Mr. Hart has met the obligations of the society in the same way he takes care of his own business matters.

Dr. Davis Foster wants a red pig that weighs 25 pounds, and he wants this pig brought to him by the man who used an automobile as the instrument to scatter his 25-pound red pig all over the road last Saturday. "That's a nice, fat pig and the doctor had hopes of raising him to be a nice, fat hog—until he was hit by the instrument of death and suddenly converted into sausage—and now the doctor wants the driver of that car to bring him another red pig. Just bring the pig down and drop him inside the fence at the Shelter."

PROGRESSIVE LEAGUE GETS BUSY FOR CITY CAMPAIGN

NEW OFFICERS TO BE CHOSEN AT SESSION TO BE HELD NEXT MONDAY NIGHT IN PELLET'S HALL.

That the New Smyrna Progressive league proposes to take an active part in the coming city election is indicated by the fact that the league is now being re-organized for the purpose of discussing candidates for city offices and platforms on which the candidates will be asked to stand.

An informal meeting of the league was held last Monday night, when the political situations were talked over and discussed and plans for the campaign were outlined.

Another meeting of the league will be held next Monday night at Pellet's hall, and notices have been sent to all members of the league, as well as those who may be interested in becoming members, to be present at that session. New officers will be chosen at that time and further plans for the future will be made.

John G. Home Severely Injured.

Many friends of J. G. Home of the Florida East Coast railway, who is in charge of the waterworks and pumping stations, will regret to know that he is laid up with a fractured knee cap and many painful bruises, caused by an accident a few days ago near Melbourne. An axle on the little track motor car on which he was riding on his trip of inspection broke, derailing the car and throwing the occupants into a ditch.—St. Augustine Record.

Mrs. A. E. Boore, son and daughter, have closed their winter home on Magnolia street and left yesterday for their Massachusetts home. Mr. Boore, who was here several weeks during the winter, returned north some time ago.

Geo. L. Branning was ill several days this week and unable to look after his duties as cashier of the State bank.

mailed me a marked copy of the Waterbury, Conn., American, with the following item on "Life at New Smyrna" appearing under the head of West Goshen:

"Joseph A. Lucas and family of Greymont, Mass., have been spending the winter at New Smyrna, on the east coast of Florida, in full view of the Indian river, and report it a cold winter there. He wore an overcoat once on an auto ride and again on the night of March 24, when it froze 9,000 acres of pot trees back in the town of Hastings, next north. New Smyrna is a city of 1,800 people with a mayor and marshal, but no cops." The assessor has the whole county and lives at the county seat. The state is democratic, or an i-segno, with tendencies towards Teddy Roosevelt. Seventy-five percent of the tourists are old progressives and they don't seem contrite or penitent. Fishing is poor, the water is cold. Citrus fruits are plenty and cheap. Culls, drops and deadpigs sell from 125 for a quarter up to 50 cents a hundred. Some have been plowed under. Mr. Lucas' party will leave Jacksonville April 26 on the steamer Comanche, Clyde line."

The people of New Smyrna will feel like congratulating Mr. Lucas on his wonderful perceptive qualities, for he made at least one truthful statement—New Smyrna is in full view of the Indian river. The people might also feel like congratulating Mr. Lucas on being able to afford an overcoat for that one little, lonely automobile ride he took. However, they might not feel like congratulating Mr. Lucas for the people of Port Orange, Daytona, Ormond, Dupont, Bunnell, Felda and a few other cities and towns in the 75 miles between this city and Hastings, should get hold of him after making the statement that Hastings is the next town north of New Smyrna. Also, he might not be a subject of congratulation if some of the young winter visitors get hold of his statement that 75 percent of the tourists are "old" progressives. "Fishing is poor, the water is cold." Did Mr. Lucas come here expecting to sit on the bank of Indian river or have a half the Atlantic ocean and have a cold fish jump out of both water into his lap? In what part of the Atlantic ocean does Mr. Lucas expect to find hot water? Very respectfully, J. Mr. Lucas.
